Arctic Oil Voyage Benefits Seen

Canada Could Win Wager by U.S.

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could be the big winner in a multi-million-dollar American gamble to prove that huge oil tankers can navigate the Northwest Passage on a year-round basis.

Humble Oil and Refinery Co. of Houston is spending $30,000,000 to send the 150,000-ton Manhattan through the passage starting Friday in hopes Alaskan oil eventually can be moved cheaply by ship to the east coast of the United States.

The Manhattan, about 1,000 feet long, is the largest ship ever to attempt the ice-infested waters of the passage. If successful, it could be the forerunner of tankers twice as big transporting up to 30,000,000,000 barrels of crude oil from the potentially-rich northern slope of Alaska to the American market.

"The tanker route would enable us to bring crude oil to the Atlantic seaboard at a substantial cost advantage over alternate methods of transportation," says Humble president Charles Jones.

One estimate is that oil moved by the tanker would cost 60 cents a barrel less than oil moved by pipeline.

Canada's contribution to the daring gamble is Arctic experience, the use of the icebreaker John A. Macdonald, aircraft fitted with special remote sensing equipment for mapping and assessing ice conditions in the passage, and the services of meteorological and telecommunications bases across the Arctic.

Because of its contributions, Canada will share in most of the scientific data gleaned from the historic venture.

If the Manhattan successfully charts a tanker route, then it follows that any oil found in the Canadian Arctic can be transported by the same route. Ottawa officials have long maintained that Arctic oil must be low-cost oil to penetrate world markets. Thus, cheap transportation is a must.

A shipping route also would make feasible development of any large mineral discoveries such as the iron ore deposits discovered at Mary River on Baffin Island.

Said to be the richest find of iron ore in the world and among the largest, the Mary River mines have been left untapped because of the short shipping season in the Canadian North.

School Taxes On Property Going—Berger

By IAN STREET

An NDP government would not remove school taxes from property during its first term of office but it would take the first step towards this goal. NDP leader Tom Berger said Tuesday.

* * *

He told a press conference here that it remains one of the goals of the NDP to remove the burden of school taxes from property. But the cost of education cannot be taken out of general revenue until an alternative source of revenue is found, the leader added.

* * *

Victory at the polls Aug. 27 would allow an NDP government to take the first step towards this goal, however, by decreeing that the financing and operation of regional colleges are a provincial rather than a local responsibility.

"We don't think the local taxpayer should be forced to pay so much for education that he rebels when asked to pay more," Mr. Berger said. "Voters are turning down regional colleges all over the province and I don't blame them."

* * *

He noted that the Liberals are promising in this election that they will remove school taxes from property. Mr. Berger added: "Dr. McGeer can say that because he is not going to be faced with this responsibility, but I think we might be."

The NDP leader stressed that if his party forms the next government it would not take away the provincial homeowner grant.

"The homeowner grant is something that people rely upon," he said, "and under an NDP government they will continue to get it."

The press conference was attended by several executive members of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association

NDP leader Tom Berger said Tuesday there would be "no wholesale firings" in the civil service if his party forms the next provincial government but added that certain top officials would be replaced.

He was commenting in an interview following a press conference on published reports in which the NDP leader was quoted as saying half a dozen deputy ministers would be fired following an NDP victory at the polls Aug. 27.

* * *

"We've got a lot of first class people in the civil service," Mr. Berger said. "We're going to give them bargaining rights so that they can protect themselves from the government, their employer.

"But there are cases I think where people who served this government well, who served Bennett well, will not really fit into a New Democratic administration."

He added: "We think these

Assault-by-Pierre Claimant Takes Too Many Pep Pills

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 17-year-old Niagara Falls, Ont., youth who says Prime Minister Trudeau assaulted him during a demonstration here Friday was taken to Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday for treatment of a suspected drug overdose.

Richard Jesmer told a reporter he had taken "about 20 pep pills or get-up pills," but did not know what type or how strong they were.

Hospital officials said he was in satisfactory condition in the emergency ward.

They said he would be kept in hospital overnight but declined to give any additional details.

Meanwhile, a justice of the peace will decide Friday whether to proceed with a charge of common assault against Mr. Trudeau following a complaint by Jesmer, who says the Liberal leader "is pretty tough for a skinny guy."

The complaint was sworn Monday by Jesmer at Vancouver police headquarters before Justice of the Peace Don Stewart. Jesmer claims Mr. Trudeau "smacked me" during a wild demonstration last Friday night at the Seaforth armory.

The incident is alleged to have taken place during a meeting between the prime minister and 300 anti-Vietnam war demonstrators at which Mr. Trudeau was booed, jeered and pelted with a banana peel.

Mr. Trudeau attended the anti-war rally with the intention of speaking, but was unable to make himself heard. It was held in advance of a $50-a-plate Liberal fund-raising dinner which Mr. Trudeau later addressed inside the armory.

Mr. Stewart said the complaint means Mr. Trudeau "is definitely charged but no evidence has been heard." He said he will hear evidence at 4:15 p.m. PDT Friday and "then I will either issue a summons or not."

NO PROCESS

"It means Mr. Trudeau literally has been charged but there has been no process to command his appearance before any court," said the justice of the peace. "It is at my discretion."

Under the Criminal Code of Canada a common assault charge can be pursued as an indictable offence or a less serious summary conviction.

If dealt with as a summary conviction the maximum pen-

Takeover by London Urged

Riots Rip Ulster

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

LONDONDERRY (UPI) — Police using armored cars and tear gas and followed by gangs of stone-throwing Protestant youths battled Catholic rioters Tuesday and early today, prompted the Ulster government to consider calling in British troops.

Catholic civil rights leaders and members of parliament urged Britain to suspend Northern Ireland's constitution and take over governing powers.

The fighting, principally between police and Catholics, broke out Tuesday afternoon when Catholic youths stoned a parade of the Protestant "Apprentice Boys of Derry."

WILD BATTLE

It stretched through the evening and into the early hours of today — a wild battle scene that saw Catholics barricaded inside their own Bogside district hurling firebombs and bricks into the faces of police who came on firing water cannon and finally tear gas.

(Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark held an emergency meeting of his cabinet security committee in Belfast and told newsmen "the calling in of British troops is one of the options open to my government in the present situation.")

Opponents of that course, including many in Britain, have argued such a move would be tantamount to handing over the government of Northern Ireland to London.

'DOOMSDAY RIOT'

The new violence in Londonderry, second largest city in Ulster and the major town holding a Roman Catholic majority here, confirmed the worst fears of those who said the Protestant celebration could turn into a doomsday of rioting.

Some 20,000 of this country's majority Protestants gathered here Tuesday to celebrate the 280th anniversary of the defeat by Protestant forces of the armies of deposed King James II of England. James was a Catholic monarch trying to fight his way back to the throne.

The brawls started with the stoning of the parade, police said, and then spread to the Bogside area outside the old city walls. There Catholics made a fortress of their home terrain with street barricades.

GIRLS MAKE BOMBS

Teenage girls filled and stuffed gasoline bombs and passed the ammunition to their men, who heaved them down atop police advancing on foot and in armored cars. Behind the police armored cars, Protestant youths advanced like wary riflemen, grabbing handfuls of stones from wheelbarrows pushed by their girls and tossing them at the Catholics.

Some 85 policemen had been injured by early today, at least eight seriously. More than 150 persons received first aid behind the Catholic barricades.

'KEEP FIGHTING'

Bernadette Devlin, a Catholic civil rights leader and member of British parliament, issued a joint statement with civil rights leader Eamonn McCann, saying the riots proved, "Northern Ireland is ungovernable under the present constitution . . ."

They urged Catholics to keep fighting until the British government "states its clear commitment to the suspension of the constitution and called immediately a constitutional conference."

POLICEMAN ABLAZE

One policeman was set afire and "seriously injured" when a gasoline bomb hit him in the chest exploding onto his face. His comrades rolled him on the ground and took him to hospital.

In Bogside behind the lines young women, mostly wearing jeans and sweaters, hustled up ammunition for their men.

"They've had this coming for a long time," said pretty, dark-haired shopgirl Maureen Roche. "We've had to put up with their bullying for years."

An elderly couple, arm-in-arm, stood fearfully in a doorway.

"My two sons are out there and I wouldn't have them anywhere else," said Mrs. Bridget Lynch, her husband nodding agreement.

Jet Overshoots, Injures Four On Highway

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands (UPI)—A Caribair DC9 jetliner Tuesday crashed through a fence at the end of a runway while landing and injured four persons on the ground as it slammed into six cars on a busy highway. The 103 persons on the plane were not hurt.

The two-engine jet operated by the Puerto Rico-based Caribbean Atlantic Airways was making a landing on a flight from San Juan when it rolled off the end of the 5,000-foot runway at Harry S. Truman Airport.

* * *

The plane narrowly averted plowing into fuel pumps at a gasoline station across the highway where an explosive fire would have been virtually certain.

Nobody on the plane was injured but four passengers in cars rammed by the plane as it skidded across the road were hospitalized, one of them in serious condition.

* * *

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said the accident was apparently a result of a failure of the "spoiler" flaps on the wings of the plane, but a Caribair spokesman said the plane apparently skidded on a rain-slippery runway.

'Phase Out' Better Than Base Closure

HALIFAX (CP) — Tom Morry, assistant deputy minister of national defence, told the National Defence Employees Association convention here Tuesday 3,000 defence employees may be laid off in the department's base consolidation program.

Morry, who was commenting on a statement by the defence employees association president, Clint Hornby of Winnipeg, said:

* * *

"You say 3,000 people may be cut. You might be right, but I hope you're wrong."

Morry, in a luncheon speech to 230 delegates, said the defence department is in for "belt tightening" and that an announcement of the measures to be taken could come "very soon."

Several Maritime Command military establishments have been mentioned in recent speculation as due for closure or severe reductions in operations.

* * *

The assistant deputy minister said he would like to see the words "close out" or "closure" replaced with "phase out." This would allow sufficient time for those affected by the changes to re-establish themselves.

He said retraining programs were necessary for those whose jobs might be lost in a consolidation program.

Moon Travellers Report Parades, Dinner Today

It's Nice Place to Visit

By RUDY ABRAMSON

HOUSTON (LAT) — The first men to visit the moon found it in a way more pleasant than Earth, and their only regret about it is that they did not get to stay longer.

"It's a stark and strangely different place," said Apollo 11 commander Neil Armstrong, "but it looked friendly to me and it was friendly."

* * *

Armstrong said that when he and astronaut Edwin Aldrin landed on the moon's Sea of Tranquility July 20, they immediately found the moon's gentle gravity preferable to that of the earth, or the weightlessness of space.

It was because they felt comfortable that they decided to go right ahead with their walk on the surface rather than take a planned rest period.

With about two-and-one-half hours to work outside, Armstrong said, "we had the problem of a five-year-old boy in a candy store. There were just too many interesting things to do.

"There was far too little time to do the myriad things we wanted to do."

* * *

When Armstrong and Aldrin climbed back into the landing craft Eagle after their moon walk, they still had half of their oxygen and a little less than half of their cooking water remaining. But they did not want to come close to exhausting their supply because they were not certain how difficult it would be to get back inside their spacecraft and repressurize its cabin.

* * *

Armstrong, Aldrin, and fellow crewman Michael Collins recounted their adventure in a press conference at the Manned Spacecraft Centre Tuesday.

They were released from quarantine late Sunday, and will set off early today for parades in New York and Chicago before the state dinner in Los Angeles tonight at 8:30 PDT.

* * *

Military bands and choruses rehearsed their numbers and White House aides recorded last-minute changes in the guest list Tuesday on the eve of one of the great parties in Los Angeles history.

In the Century Plaza ballroom, the tune of Fly Me to The Moon mingled with the sound of television technicians setting up their equipment.

Early Wednesday evening 1,600 guests — including 55 astronauts, 44 state governors, leading members of Congress and a glittering assemblance of aviation

Rumor Wins Favor For Minority Rule

ROME (UPI) — The Italian senate Tuesday night endorsed the minority government of Premier Mariano Rumor and thus officially established it in office.

The 322-seat senate gave Rumor a 64-vote majority in the vote of confidence. The chamber of deputies, lower house of Italy's parliament had endorsed Rumor's minority government Sunday with a 51-vote majority.

After failing to heal a breach in the Socialist party and establish a new coalition, Rumor formed a government made up of only his Christian Democrat colleagues. It adopted a program of modified reforms, hoping to stay in office until a new coalition and majority government could be formed.

Immediately after voting, the senate adjourned until mid-September, when the political tempo is expected to pick up sharply as millions of workers and students return from vacation.

GORDE HUNTER

Mixed Lot

WE are indeed a mixed-up lot.

THERE is a sick, mawkish touch to that little caper at the Chappaquiddick. A great outpouring of pity for Senator Ted Kennedy and the crosses he has had to bear. An almost pathetic absolvement by the majority of the public after Kennedy mouthed the carefully written script on a national TV hookup.

But who cries for Mary Joe Kopechne? Isn't it axiomatic the majority offers condolences to the wrong party?

The Kennedy name blinds us to the real issue.

A thug guns down a policeman and the civil rights group goes to incredible lengths of verbosity to save him from the law which states his life shall be forfeit. Who cries for the policemen? His family and fellow officers.

WE HAVE an infantile moment of glee at the discomfiture of the French government because it has to devalue the franc. We laugh at its problem, remembering France's gold hoarding policies of not so long ago. But we laugh, forgetting that the devaluation of the franc merely puts added strain on the other monetary systems of the world, including our own.

Aren't we losing our sense of real values by placing such importance to those California murders of a rather obscure filmland sexpot, a hairdresser and a coffee fortune heiress?

HOW MANY Canadians revelled at the antics of those protesters in Vancouver who showed such a lack of couth in their confrontation with Prime Minister Trudeau? Hell. We should all be ashamed to think that our prime minister wasn't even allowed the courtesy of a rebuttal because the sign-carrying limber lips shouted him down with insults. Manners? The word is foreign to their ears.

WE SOMEHOW or other take for granted that a gifted athlete should be able to command more than a quarter of a million dollars for running with a ball, dribbling it down a floor or knocking it out of a park. But doesn't it strike you as being completely out of reason these sporting abilities should be worth more money than paid to the president of the country? And you wonder why we are saddled with runaway inflation.

OR RECALL that little happening down at Ogden Point a few days ago. The stories said that thousands of Victorians cheered the crews of the two Russian fishing vessels as they left for home. Some of the impressionable female populace hugged and kissed the Russian sailors and one observer said the demonstration probably cemented relations between our people and theirs.

Hold on a minute. Weren't those Russian captains fined $2,500 apiece for violating our coastal fishing waters? Weren't they taking a calculated risk? They blew it this time, but how many times have they won the gamble?

It matters not a whit that they happened to be Russian vessels. I've long since given up the notion that Russians are the nearest thing to bogey men and showing friendship to them is admirable, as it is to any race of people.

BUT I can't for the life of me understand why convicted lawbreakers should be kissed, hugged and cheered. They were taking the fish out of our nets, the money out of our fishermen's pockets. Cheer them? Let them skulk out of harbor in the dark of night.

As long as we continue to liorlize two bit hoodlums like Bonnie and Clyde via the flicks, we are simply setting them up for idolization by the younger generation. Tawdry, vicious criminals deserve nothing more than average obituary notices.

AND you wonder why our juvenile courts are bulging. We have a misplaced set of values that led The London Daily Sketch to observe:

"Only if an inquiry is allowed to take place will we be convinced that in America the police and the lawyers probe the mistakes and misjudgments of the leader of the greatest political family in the land as thoroughly as they would the accident of a downtown New York cabdriver."

Seven Rules May Help Heart Patient's Care

By G. T. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 51 and was in hospital for 21 days with a heart attack just a year ago. Is there a book I can buy on how to care for your heart after a heart attack?

I joined the YMCA to do some jogging, swimming, and exercising. Will this hurt me in any way? I am a bus driver and was off work six months—A.T.Z.

There are books on the subject, but some fairly simple rules usually are all you need. You can check with the local branch of the American Heart Association for literature if you need it, but I can give you seven brief rules which may well be sufficient.

- Avoid overweight.
- Avoid eating saturated fats. This means, chiefly, avoiding fat from meat. As a spread for bread, use any of the many that are advertised as being made with vegetable oils or polyunsaturated oils.
- Don't smoke. If you must, a pipe is preferable to cigarettes or cigars.
- Avoid emotional tension. Learn to relax and not fret over problems that aren't worth fretting over.
- Get reasonable rest.
- Get moderate exercise. But don't overdo it. I trust that your jogging, swimming, and with the approval of your physi- exercising at the Y are done with the approval of your physician. Any exercise or exertion that causes shortness of breath, chest discomfort, or undue fatigue is too much.
- If your blood pressure is high, you should be under such treatment as your doctor prescribes.

Follow those seven rules and you will be doing the things you should to take care of yourself properly.

Your heart attack was a year ago. You were off work for six months, which means you have had only about six months of near-usual activity. I trust that you check with your doctor periodically. He should know about your Y activities and evaluate the amount of any extra exertion.

Rangers Sign Syl Apps Jr.

NEW YORK (AP)—Syl Apps Jr., a 22-year-old son of the former Toronto Maple Leafs star, has signed a contract with New York Rangers, the National Hockey League team said Tuesday.

The young Apps scored 14 goals in 27 games for Kingston of the Ontario Senior Hockey Association last season. He also played two games for Buffalo of the American League, collecting three points on one goal and two assists.

alty is a $500 fine and six months in jail. If handled as an indictable offence, the maximum penalty is two years in prison.

The Crown prosecutor usually determines the seriousness of the offence committed against the common assault statute and which course he will follow.

Mr. Stewart said that if he decides the prosecution is to proceed, a summons could be issued requiring Mr. Trudeau's attendance in court or a warrant could be issued for his arrest.

In Ottawa Tuesday, the prime minister turned aside questions of what he would do if he has to face the assault charge.

"Well, I'd hoped I'd have other occasions to go to Vancouver," he said in an interview.

UNDER OATH

Mr. Trudeau suggested the reporters were asking hypothetical questions and said "do you want me to testify now . . . under oath or what?"

Jesmer said in an interview he had become "all excited and worked up" by the mood of the crowd and a book he had read on "Canadian complicity" in the Vietnam war by the time Mr. Trudeau jumped up on a sound truck to address the rally.

"You know he's got a lot of nerve—maybe courage—to get up in front of all those people with signs, and yelling and chathing," said Jesmer, who did not explain why he waited four days to swear out his complaint.

NEW PRESIDENT

"I didn't expect he would say anything and that if he did it really wouldn't be nothing anyhow," said Jesmer, who came to Vancouver two months ago.

He said he became really excited when Mr. Trudeau ripped a sign from the front of a young girl. The sign read "Hustle Grain, Not Women."

Seconds after that incident, Mr. Trudeau jumped off the truck with two aides, RCMP security men closed ranks around him and the group started jostling through the crowd to the armory door.

"I called him a name," said Jesmer. "Maybe I shouldn't have said it, I knew he was uptight too. . . ."

"Holy man, he was mad. His eyes went funny, sort of glassy . . . and I knew it was coming.

"His hand came up and smacked me. Pow: It wasn't a slap but sort of a karate thing, and the palm pushed my face against my nose."

"I thought he was a little guy. He's just a skinny guy, but boy, he's tough. I think he has some karate training or something like that."

Jesmer said his face was sore for half an hour but "he didn't draw blood."

At Niagara Falls, Gesmer's grandmother thinks the teenager will get nowhere in his legal action against the prime minister.

NO MONEY

"I don't know what to think," Emma Jesmer said Tuesday. "I don't think he will get anywhere. He's got to have a lawyer and if he hasn't got any money, he can't get one.

"I'm not sticking up for the boy or for Trudeau. The boy shouldn't have sworn at him and Troudeau shouldn't have touched him. I know the boy was in the wrong. There is nothing we can do about it."

Mr. Jesmer has said the prime minister lost his cool during the incident with his son.

"Trudeau just lost his cool. The boy didn't deserve it and I can't see how the prime minister can go around hitting anyone who provokes him."

The youth's parents are divorced, and his mother has remarried.

Here's how some experienced reporters who were at the scene saw the incident:

Ian Macdonald, Ottawa correspondent for the Vancouver Sun:

NO CONTACT

"The crowd was screaming the favorite four-letter words. On one occasion I saw Trudeau gesture toward someone in the crowd with his right hand, but not contacting.

"And then halfway up the walk there was a youth with long hair and wearing what looked like a battered boy scout hat. He was shouting and I distinctly heard one of the less lovely versions of the four-letter word plus additions.

"He also swung in the prime minister's direction. Trudeau, either hearing the obscenity or seeing the arm, glanced to his right and with a combined open-handed slap-type push knocked the brim of the hat down on to the youth's forehead and nose.

PRIDE HURT

"It wasn't a fist nor was it a smash that the youth received. The only thing hurt seemed to be his pride."

(Macdonald said he met Richard Jesmer Saturday night in a supermarket parking lot and told him: "You are not the man I saw pushed by the prime minister.")

Tom Hazlitt, Toronto Star:

"The PM jumped down from a sound truck, there was a slight pause while a couple of Mounties got around him, and then this little knot moved toward (the armory) door.

"It was an ugly scene, people reached out at the PM and made menacing moves toward him. There was a kid alongside this little knot who called Trudeau a creep.

OPEN-HANDED

"Trudeau reached out and gave the kid an open-handed shove straight over somebody's shoulder and flattened the brim of the kid's hat on to his face. There was no clenched fist, no big swing, but more of a push than a blow."

Veteran Vancouver police inspector Bud Errington said Tuesday he feared for the physical safety of Prime Minister Trudeau last Friday.

"It was the most abusive mob I have ever seen during 35 years of police work," said Insp. Errington.

After 21½ hours at tranquility base, they blasted off to rejoin Collins.

And almost from the moment of liftoff from the moon, Armstrong said, they knew they would be on the right track because they could follow landmarks on the surface as the moon receded below them. "We enjoyed the ride more than we can say," Armstrong said.

As Eagle closed in on Columbia, Collins watched them coming straight in "as if they were riding on a rail."

Then, he said half-joking, "for the first time I felt we were going to really carry this thing off."

★ ★ ★

As Armstrong manoeuvered Eagle to avoid a large crater on the way down, he said he was concerned over their rapidly dwindling fuel supply.

"We were," he said, "quite close to our legal limits."

Canada Big Winner In Arctic Oil Trip

Canadian officials also are sensitive about Canadian sovereignty over northern waters. Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons some time ago that while Canadian ownership over northern islands is not disputed, the same cannot be said about Arctic waterways.

For this reason, the external affairs department is sending an observer with the Macdonald.

Also aboard the icebreaker will be representatives of the department of northern development, energy, mines and resources, and defence.

The only Canadian aboard the Manhattan itself will be Capt. Tom Pullen, an Arctic expert from the transport department who has been designated the official Canadian representative.

Sailing plans of the Manhattan have been delayed because of minor troubles encountered during sea trials. Built in 1962, it was broken into five pieces earlier this year and rebuilt at shipyards to strengthen it for the icy trials ahead.

The Manhattan also was outfitted with a specially-designed icebreaking bow, giving it up to 50 per cent more power than conventional ice-breakers.

Capt. Pullen said in a recent interview that the Manhattan's late start probably means it will not encounter bad ice conditions on the first leg of its 4,500-mile trip through the passage.

"The first leg, which ends at Resolute on Cornwallis Island, should be a piece of cake except that the ship and crew will have to show a certain amount of humility for icebergs in Baffin Bay," he said.

★ ★ ★

West of Resolute, navigation becomes more difficult because landmarks are not as pronounced and there is less knowledge of water depths.

One Canadian cabinet minister with knowledge of the Arctic believes that because of the changing ice conditions from one year to the next, it will take three or four voyages through the passage to prove its value as a transport route.

Cong Offensive May Stall U.S. Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Plans by President Nixon to withdraw more American troops from South Vietnam hang in the balance after Viet Cong guerrillas and North Vietnamese attacks broke a 7½-week battlefield lull.

The mortar and rocket attacks on 142 cities, towns and camps, which killed 52 Americans and wounded more than 300, could delay a new withdrawal which the president intended to order this month.

Nixon was faced with one of the most crucial decisions on the Vietnam war since he entered the White House in January—whether to view the new flare-up as the beginning of a new Communist offensive or just an isolated gesture of muscle-flexing with little long-range military significance.

The attacks were launched just a few hours after State Secretary William Rogers left open the possibility that the low level of combat activity for almost two months was a sign the Communists wanted to begin a mutual slowdown of the war.

The U.S. now is completing its first troop withdrawal of the war—25,000 men who are being replaced by South Vietnamese government troops.

Later This Month

The White House announced after Nixon returned from his globe-circling tour Aug 3 that a decision on further withdrawals would be made later this month.

Before the latest Communist attacks, the expectation was that Nixon would announce new withdrawals of up to 100,000 troops by the end of the year.

Nixon was reported being urged by some of his political advisers that the lull meant Hanoi was responding to the start of American troop withdrawals and that more pullbacks should be announced unless the Communists launched a major offensive in the next two or three weeks.

Military commanders, however, appeared to be more worried, believing that a battlefield storm was about to break and that the president should slow down or abandon plans for a further United States disengagement from the war.

Asked whether he thought the battlefield lull was ending, state department spokesman Carl Bartch said: "I think that's impossible to say at the present time. I think we will just have to wait and see."

Nixon has called for progress on three fronts as a basis for a unilateral withdrawal of American troops in South Vietnam, now totalling more than 500,000.

Reason to Pause

One is the level of Communist military activity. A new offensive, or even a series of carefully-staged but limited attacks appearing to indicate preparation for a major offensive and keeping the U.S. and its allies off balance, would almost certainly give the president reason to pause.

The second is the ability of the South Vietnamese army to take over more fighting fronts from American troops.

This appears to be proceeding at a pace satisfactory to American military commanders.

The third condition laid down by Nixon is progress at the Paris peace talks, which still fail to provide a solid sign of a breakthrough toward a peaceful settlement of the war.

In Paris, U.S. officials said Nixon's plans for phased withdrawals of U.S. troops from Vietnam were not likely to be affected by the sudden end to the weeks-long lull in fighting.

But, they added, if the widespread attacks launched by the Communists Monday night turned into a sustained offensive, the pace of the withdrawal could be affected.

Making their first comment on the attacks, U.S. officials at the talks said it looked as though the other side was saying "no" to any tacit agreement for mutual de-escalation.

Viet Cong delegation sources said about the attacks: 'As long as the American aggression continues, we will continue our struggle."

Army Denies Probe Shelved

Palace Spy Ring Link Likely

SAIGON (Reuters) — Reliable sources said Tuesday there may be a strong link between the murder charge against eight United States Special Service soldiers and a presidential palace spy ring recently discovered by the South Vietnamese police.

The sources said the alleged murder victim was an agent paid by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency who also worked for North Vietnam as head of an international espionage cell in South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu's palace.

The Vietnam commander of the U.S. Special Forces (Green Berets), Col. Robert Rheault, has been relieved of his command and charged with premeditated murder and conspiracy to commit murder. Six of his officers and a sergeant face the same charges.

The U.S. Army has refused to go into details, other than to say the charges arose out of the alleged shooting of a Vietnamese near the coastal town of Nha Trang on June 20.

Huynh Van Trong, a political adviser to President Thieu, was arrested by police earlier this month on charges of associating with a Viet Cong spy ring which had contacts in Hong Kong, Laos, Cambodia and France.

He was jailed with 65 other persons, including a leading Saigon tailor who said he had fled from North Vietnam.

Police sources said they believe the leader of the spy ring was a higher-placed official than Trong and had contacts in the palace.

Reliable sources said they believe this higher-placed official was an agent employed both by the CIA and by the South Vietnamese intelligence service and had access to the highest level of information.

The man's alleged part in the spy ring was uncovered by the CIA, the sources said, adding they believed the man had disappeared.

George Gregory, the lawyer of one of the eight Green Berets arrested on murder charges, said Tuesday night the investigation into the case has been temporarily suspended to await, he believed, the arrival of other civilian counsel.

But army sources insisted the investigation has not been shelved.

Many questions in the case remain unanswered, including why the arrests and charges against the Green Berets were announced before the investigation was completed.

Still to be revealed are who ordered the arrests and why the case was made public if top-level security was at stake.

Three U.S. navy ships, including a submarine-rescue craft, were seen off Nha Trang last week, apparently conducting search operations.

This gave rise to the belief that the alleged victim was taken out to sea and shot before his body was chained and thrown overboard.

Naval sources said the navy mission was not successful and navy spokesmen refused even to admit the ships were there.

Gregory said Monday night he hoped a body was found because when all the facts in the case were revealed, and if it was proved that anyone was killed, it would show that his client was a hero and not a criminal.

Also facing murder charges with Middleton and Col. Rheault are: Maj. David E. Crew, Capt. Leland J. Brumley, Capt. Robert F. Marasco, Capt. Budge E. Williams, Chief WO Edward M Boyle, Sgt. Alvin L. Smith Jr.

NATO Man Breaks Security

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A French national working at NATO headquarters was arrested while violating security regulations, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The person's identity was not disclosed but the spokesman said he belonged to the alliance's international staff. He was fired immediately.

NATO officials said French authorities were handling the case. They indicated the man had been caught in the headquarters "restricted zone," without acceptable reasons for his presence there, one night last week.

Reds in Retreat In Some Areas

SAIGON (AP)—Viet Cong guerrilla and North Vietnamese forces were reported in retreat in some areas after breaking a 7½-week lull Tuesday by shelling 128 cities and towns across South Vietnam and loosing ground attacks on 14 military bases or positions.

The main attacks were centred on two fronts—in the 3rd Corps area just north of Saigon where attacking forces fought into three cities for a time, and around Da Nang in the far north.

But U.S. officers expected the enemy to keep up the attacks, and this was borne out by a mortar and rocket barrage Tuesday night that hit a United States Army brigade base camp at Quan Loi, 65 miles north of Saigon.

U.S. officials said preliminary figures showed more than 500 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong and 52 Americans were killed and 344 Americans wounded in the biggest Communist-led attack since May 11. At least 56 South Vietnamese government troops were killed in the 3rd Corps area.

"It's probably the start of their fall campaign but there is no indication how long they'll be able to sustain it," said a spokesman for Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, U.S. commander in Vietnam.

Abrams was quoted as saying "excellent intelligence" had warned the U.S. and its allies of the impending attacks, reinforcements were sent into threatened areas and B-52 Stratofortresses hammered Communist positions.

THREE CITIES RAIDED

The heaviest attacks centred on An Loc, a provincial capital 60 miles north of Saigon; Quan Loi, northeast of An Loc; the provincial capital of Tay Ninh, 65 miles northeast of Saigon, and Loc Ninh, 70 miles north.

Some North Vietnamese succeeded in fighting their way into Loc Ninh, An Loc and Quan Loi but were driven out. A U.S. spokesman said the Viet Cong hoped to occupy one of these cities long enough to set up a provisional government for a propaganda victory.

FALLING BACK

The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were reported falling back toward the Cambodian border in some areas north of Saigon under relentless attack by U.S. fighter-bombers.

Other North Vietnamese forces fired mortar rounds at the U.S. Navy hospital in Da Nang and wounded 12 American patients and six staff members.

Independence

Romania Policy Upheld

BUCHAREST (AP) — President Nicolae Ceausescu made a cautious commitment Tuesday to continue Romania's independent policies and gradual democratization of the country's life.

Speaking at the close of the Romanian Communist party congress and later at an open-air rally of 150,000, Ceausescu avoided anything that could be interpreted as a challenge to the Soviet Communist party or its orthodox allies.

FULL APPROVAL

Instead, he stressed that the congress decision had the approval of the representatives of the 70 foreign parties as well as the Romanian delegates.

The last session of the congress also removed from the ruling nine-man standing presidium two old-guard Communists Kivu Stoica and Gheorghe Apostol. Both were closely associated with Ceausescu's predecessor, Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej. They were said to have pro-Soviet leanings. The move further consolidated Ceausescu's control over the party.

The Danger Mounts

FOR A LITTLE WHILE the peace-keepers seemed to have won the day in Londonderry. But at the finish it was the radicals who overcame the moderates among them and brought new crisis to the already-explosive situation in Northern Ireland yesterday.

When an estimated 15,000 Ulster apprentices marched in the old and picturesque city to commemorate the raising of the siege of 1689 during the religious wars, there was hope for a time that violence would be avoided.

But it had been feared. The Roman Catholics, who are in a reported majority in 'Derry, called the parade a provocation. It's an annual affair.

There were 1,400 Royal Ulster Constabulary on hand, and British troops were standing by, and, mingling with the crowd and with the marchers were moderate leaders of both factions. It was they who successfully interceded when the first rocks and bottles were thrown at the parade and who discouraged the hotheads who shouted, "Throw them back."

But in the end fever-high feelings could not be restrained.

Regrettably, from a leading Roman Catholic politician, Eddie McAteer, had come the invitation for intervention from the Republic of Ireland that moderates on both sides have feared.

"If this is indeed our hour of trial," he exhorted, "if we are to be beaten into the ground as a helpless, unarmed minority, then I pray to God that our watching brethren will not stand aside any longer."

Other Irishmen will pray to God that no such thing occurs, for, in Mr. McAteer's own words, it would mean "the raising of the old curtain on the last act of the age-old Irish drama."

It could mean no less than war.

Friends of Ireland everywhere, of the Republic and Ulster alike, will hope that reasonable men will prevail in a tragedy prolonged by intolerance which belongs in another age.

Wealth of the Sea

IT CANNOT be counted as sour grapes that Soviet scientists who took part with Americans in a 55-day ocean study expedition remarked that what was found on the Pacific floor was more important to man than the samples from the moon.

"The commercial ocean can offer to humanity things we cannot even imagine," said one of the Russians, Dr. Alexander Lisitzin, a marine geologist from the Moscow Academy of Sciences. "The simple idea of the ocean as a supply of fish is at an end, and a new vista is being opened that can offer man more in more varied ways. The ocean is like a hidden treasure . . ."

The lunar rocks, in comparison, may indicate how the moon was formed, but the benefits to mankind are chiefly in the side-effects of the amazing technological achievement of going to the moon, collecting them and bringing them back.

There is more than a touch of irony, therefore, in the fact that almost simultaneously from San Diego came the Soviet geologist's enthusiastic account of the ocean-bottom exploration and an article describing a falling-off in American interest in this field.

Just a few years ago, this article said, oceanography was believed to be entering its golden age, "but the future has dimmed with a shortage of money, no sense of direction, a lack of public zeal and a drain of talent to more lucrative fields."

It cited as revealing developments that sophisticated deep-sea submersibles developed by private corporations were being put into storage; that highly skilled technicians were leaving; that industries in many cases had cut their programs; that funding of government agencies had dropped or remained constant, and "perhaps most important of all, plans to form an oceanographic organization equivalent to the space program of NASA have been shelved by the Nixon administration for at least a year."

By all accounts, the Soviet Union is most actively pursuing ocean studies. The United States may be missing the chance of assuming a more important kind of scientific leadership if it keeps its eyes on the moon and beyond, and pays less attention to the wealth for mankind that lies in and below the oceans.

Mayoralty Peril

IT'S EASY ENOUGH to picture executives of corporations being liable to fines and prison terms for polluting Canadian waters, as intended by Prime Minister Trudeau according to his Vancouver address in which he said his government was prepared to "use the federal criminal power to force industries and even municipalities to do certain things." But just how new criminal provisions would be applied to mayors, whom the prime minister also mentioned specifically as potential candidates for this treatment, is a question that is intriguing, to say the least.

Imagine, for instance, that the municipality of Fictoria is discharging raw sewage into the sea. The provincial minister of health finds the municipality is not meeting minimum standards for recreational waters and calls upon it to install a sewage treatment plant. The council of Fictoria has plans and estimates prepared and puts a borrowing bylaw to the voters. But Fictorians want neither to pay higher taxes nor to spoil their lovely Clobber Point with a treatment plant. They reject the bylaw.

Is this the time at which the provincial authorities lay a charge under the new federal criminal law and His Worship takes the rap? Can he escape by resigning? Would his successor automatically inherit the penalty? Who would run for the mayoralty?

Somehow one gets the notion the prime minister was just exaggerating to drive home a point. British Columbia Health Minister Ralph Loffmark appears to think so, too, because he says he is "sure Mr. Trudeau was referring to carelessness, where the responsibility is looked upon as a matter of personal habits of cleanliness and health. And he is right to insist upon personal care."

That's not what Mr. Trudeau said. But it may be of some comfort to Canada's mayors that the prime minister can be quick to change his mind. It took the peeved Pierre only days, for instance, to restore the "nobodies" of the Opposition to the status of "somebodies."

Stockholm Talks Drag in Low Gear

By ROLAND HUNTFORD from Stockholm

THE Stockholm negotiations between Canadian and Chinese diplomats over the recognition of Peking have reached an impasse. Starting February this year, the talks progressed rapidly at first, but then slowed down. The reason seemed to be connected with Chinese diplomatic changes.

* * *

The talks started when the Chinese embassy in Stockholm was led by a charge d'affaires. The ambassador had been recalled to Peking because of the Cultural Revolution and he was not replaced for over two years. A successor finally arrived at the end of June.

It appears that the charge d'affaires, lacking position and importance, was able to talk freely with his Canadian opposite number here, and did not feel obliged to take up fixed positions. At all events, the Canadians were pleased at the quick progress they were able to make at the beginning.

* * *

Canadian embassy officials here have said that they were able to break the ice easily, and get to the point where either side could ask for an appointment at a moment's notice. In other words, a dialogue had been started, and at least in Stockholm a kind of rough and ready diplomatic intercourse was established.

Early in the talks the Canadians are believed to have made it clear that in principle they were prepared to establish diplomatic relations with Peking, but that this would have to be considered as a question on its own, uncomplicated by any other issues. It was the question of Formosa that worried the Canadians, since Peking had given hints of wanting to force through their dogma of one China in accepting Canadian recognition.

Another stumbling-block was Chinese membership of the United Nations. While the Canadians, presumably, favor Peking's entry into the UN they are not prepared to touch this thorny problem now.

* * *

It seems also that at the beginning of the Stockholm talks, Chinese diplomats were willing to consider Canada's recognition as a question isolated for the moment from extraneous considerations. But as negotiations proceeded their attitude changed. And they are assumed to have broached the question of Peking's sovereignty over Formosa.

But whatever the content of the talks, at least Chinese and Canadian diplomats were meeting regularly. They had got to the point where Chinese diplomats drove often and openly to the Canadian embassy without attempts at concealment. Both sides nevertheless had agreed to conduct their talks with the greatest discretion — and the Canadians have kept their side of the bargain as well as the Chinese have.

* * *

All progress appears to have ceased with the arrival of the new Chinese ambassador, Mr. Wang Tung. Mr. Wang Tung is a man of some importance in the Chinese Foreign Service, specializing in European relations, and having previously served in Albania. He is assumed to have brought a detailed and rigid brief from the foreign ministry in Peking, and to be engaged in trying to force concessions from the Canadians. It is hard to establish his demands, but the signs point to Formosa.

Few sessions have been held since the ambassador's arrival, and the prospect is that the talks will drag on in low gear for a long time.

New Course for Britain

Shifts of Power in an Anarchic World

By DR. ARNOLD TOYNBEE

THERE have been two simultaneous major changes in the world within the last half century and particularly since 1945. The spread of nationalism has made it impracticable for even the strongest great power to "go it alone" in trying to impose its will on the rest of the world, or even on just a portion of it. This change is illustrated by the trouble into which the United States has run in its attempt, since 1945, to impose its will on the fringe of eastern Asia.

The second radical change in world affairs is that, in the very age in which militant nationalism has become world-wide, the astonishing contemporary advance of technology has knit together, more closely than ever before, the fates of all the world's 125 local sovereign national states.

* * *

If human nature was even 51 per cent rational, mankind today would be responding to this pair of radical changes by organizing a world government with a federal constitution. We are, however, so highly irrational and so tightly enslaved to past habits that many generations or centuries of self-inflicted suffering may lie between our day and the date of the eventual solution of our common political problem; and we cannot be sure that we shall allow ourselves to survive long enough to grow ripe for solving the problem through sating ourselves with bitter experience. We may liquidate ourselves before that. Meanwhile, the people of each of our 125 stubbornly nationalist states will have to live, as best they can, in the present anarchic world.

American experience in Vietnam has made it manifest that Britain cannot play the role of an imperial power, or even of a self-constitutional anti-Communist "policeman." If this lesson for Britain needed driving home, the withdrawal from Aden did it.

* * *

Yet there have been vigorous and mixed reactions in Britain to the report of the Duncan Commission (made by Sir Val Duncan, ex-ambassador Sir Frank Roberts, and economist Andrew Shonfield) on what Britain's diplomatic representation in the rest of the world should be now that Britain is no longer a great world power, but has become a "major power of the second rank."

The Duncan Report favors the primacy of commercial over wider political interests and the concentration of both commercial and political activity within the area of the rich trading nations primarily in Europe and North America.)

The great merit of the report is that it raises the general question of the part that Britain should now try to play in world affairs.

The West European states that have sunk from being great powers to being second-class countries are comparatively lucky. They are geographically compact and socially homogeneous, and, united, they would constitute a regional power of the present calibre of the Soviet Union and the United Sates, and of the future calibre of China.

Japan and Australia do not have this option; their geographical positions have condemned them to be out on a limb.

We do not yet know whether the West European countries are going to take advantage of the opportunity that geography and history have offered to them, but it is obvious that Britain's paramount objective should be to gain admittance into the European Community.

It is also obvious that, the more comprehensive this community becomes and the more closely it integrates itself, the greater will be its say in the affairs of a world in which the scale of operations of all kinds has been swiftly increasing and is going swiftly to increase still further.

Britain, like the other West European countries, is going to be either a member of a united Europe or going to be a local sovereign nullity, and the premium on not condemning ourselves to be a nullity is so great that the Duncan Commission is justified in drawing a distinction between an "inner circle" of British interests, within which Britain's commitments should be total, and an outer circle, within which our commitments should be selective.

In the "outer circle" one major commitment that has become a millstone round British necks should be resolutely eliminated. While Britain should play her full proportionate part in the defence of Europe, she should renounce military commitments elsewhere beyond those entailed in membership of the United Nations. Britain should also recognize that the United Nations cannot impose law and order effectively even in minor states, unless its fiat is backed by the pooled power of the United States and the Soviet Union. The present situation in the Middle East demonstrates that this enabling condition for effective action by the UN is almost as remote as world government is.

This means that the backward major part of the world is probably going to wallow in anarchy for an indefinite time to come, and local anarchy may spark off a world war.

The most controversial of the questions raised by the Duncan Report is what Britain's non-military activities in the "outer circle" should be; and here the critics hold that Britain should not take a narrow-minded view of her "outer circle" interests. The cost of pacific representation is trifling compared with the cost of trying to make Britain's presence felt by acquiring, maintaining, and ineffectively employing armed forces and their weapons. It would be a self-defeating attempt to achieve a petty saving of foreign exchange if, in the greater part of the world, Britain's representation were confined to the sole business of promoting British commercial exports. Though, in the "outer circle," future military commitment ought to be reduced to vanishing-point, Britain still has a responsibility for doing all that can be done by non-military means to promote the welfare of mankind as a whole.

* * *

Britain cannot slough off the obligations of her common humanity, and to try to would also be contrary to her national interests, even if it were morally acceptable. It would be inexpedient because the politically divided world now has an indivisible destiny, for weal or woe.

In Britain's embassies in the "outer circle," commercial attaches will be important, but cultural attaches will be important, too, and they will actually do part of the commercial attaches' work for them, because they will do this in a less direct and in a less self-seeking way. The commercial attache's job is to "get" things for his country, and the response to his efforts will therefore be equally "hard-boiled."

* * *

The cultural attache's job is to "give" things that his country has to offer. His business is to find out what elements in British culture are valuable for the people among whom he is operating, and to meet their needs and requests. He is trying to give his clients what he has found that they want, and the response to his work is therefore likely to be warm-hearted if he does his job with the skill and devotion of the representatives of the British Council.

Even in terms of a commercial balance-sheet, one cultural attache is probably worth two commercial attaches and 50 British Council libraries distributed judiciously over the face of the earth, will cost less than a gunboat, a bombing plane, or a commando. They will cost less and they will bring in positive returns of good will, whereas the cost of maintaining a military presence is likely to be psychologically and commercially counter-productive.

* * *

The Duncan Commission has frankly faced the fact that there has been a radical change in Britain's position in the world, and that Britain must re-adjust her policy to match. Facing facts is the essential first step towards coping with them. The Duncan Commission is an indication that Britain may be going to avoid the fatal mistake of Lot's wife and of modern Spain, of wistfully looking backward.

I Beg to Differ . . .

The Hazardous Name Game

By FRANK LOWE

ONE of the more dangerous social games a man can play, apparently, is not spin-the-bottle nor post office. In those games the worst that can happen is that a guy may get kissed.

The game I am talking about can earn you a punch on the nose.

This game doesn't have any real name, as far as I know, but it might be called, "Do You Remember Old What's His Name?"

* * *

It occurs when you unexpectedly bump into someone from your old home town.

This bumpee completely ignores the fact that you left your old hometown while a stripling in your teens, and have returned since then only for quick visits.

He also assumes that you have complete and instant recall.

Your first warning that you are once again to play "Do You Remember Old What's His Name?" usually is a slap on the back in a hotel lobby and a loud voice saying:

"Frank, old boy — how are you?"

* * *

You turn, to stare into a completely unknown face.

But once you HAVE turned you are trapped in the game. The first few moves, however, are not too painful. You merely paste a fake, gee-its-great-to-see-you-old-buddy smile on your face, and hope this inquisition won't last too long.

That hope is soon gone. You try to say you are busy but he grabs you by the arm and insists you sit awhile and talk about the old home town. And as everybody I grew up with in my old home town got to be at least six feet tall, while I never topped the five-foot-six mark, I generally find myself doing just this.

Then the game begins in earnest.

"Remember Jack Brimsley?" your antagonist asks.

"Jack Brimsley?" you mutter.

'Sure, good old Jack," he adds. "Used to take out your sister."

"Oh, you mean the guy with the squint?" you parry.

"No, no," is the reply. "Great big fellow. You must remember him. He once gave you a real licking for spying on him when he was courting your sister in the parlor."

"Oh yeah," you laugh hollowly. "Good old Jack Brimsley."

* * *

"I knew you'd remember Jack," your unknown boyhood buddy goes on. "He finally married Ruth Flam — you remember Ruthie?"

"Ruth Flam?" you query. "A big, sloppy girl?"

The hand on your arm tightens painfully. "Watch it, old buddy," your old buddy growls. "Ruth Flam is my sister-in-law and a sweeter, lovelier girl you never met."

"Sure, sure, old buddy," you whimper. "Just take it easy on my arm."

All this time, of course, you are not only completely in the dark about these people he is mentioning; you are just as completely in the dark as to who your old buddy might be. So you try your own inept hand at gamesmanship.

"You were quite a cut-up in the physics lab," you say, remembering that there had been a large, beefy lad whose name you could recall after all these years who had been such a character.

"No," he replies. "You're confused. You're thinking of the biology classes. Boy, what a ball we had."

* * *

However, as you had been turfed out of the biology class on the grounds of gross stupidity after the first couple of sessions, this doesn't help in the identity hunt.

But your old buddy goes on. "You must remember Doris Timbo," he says. "You took her out enough times."

This time the memory machine does work. You whistle and, happy to at last show some signs of intelligence, says something like:

"Boy, was she a hot number. Wowee! Do I remember Doris . . ."

It is at this point that one is liable to receive the punch on the nose. Because Doris Timbo, naturally, is this guy's sister. And this guy — all too belatedly you remember — is Dick Timbo, once our school's best all-around athlete.

* * *

The only time I ever played this game and enjoyed it, in fact, was when a fellow greeted me and after we went over a list of names all unknown to me, he said, "Aren't you Frank Smith from Ecum Secum?"

That's the way all these meetings should end.

Fish Talk Canadian

From The Ottawa Journal

For five years officialdom at Toronto has been trying to make Ontario fishermen call pickerel walleyes.

They've failed. Capitulation comes with new regulations which reverse the order and give the pickerel name first place.

The change from the Canadian pickerel to the American walleye was part of an ambitious program to establish a common North American nomenclature for game fish.

It bargained against the independence of Ontario fishermen. "Hell," confessed one supervisor, "we couldn't even get our men to stop saying pickerel."

While they gave in to continentalism on pickerel and lost, the department kept the Canadian maskinonge over the American muskellunge — and lost here too. Fishermen favor muskie.

Now, if we can just get some flying wings, middles and inside wings back onto the football fields in place of the flankers, guards and tackles we'll have struck another blow for Canadian sport.

Today In History

Florence Nightingale, reformer of hospital nursing, died 59 years ago today—in 1910. In her youth Miss Nightingale did much philanthropic work and visited hospitals and reformatories in Europe and studied nursing. At the beginning of the Crimean War wounded soldiers suffered terribly from the inefficiency of treatment they received and she went with 34 nurses to the battlefield. Her self-sacrificing services made her famous.

1930—Forty-five men were killed in a mine disaster in Blakeburn, B.C.

1946—Writer H. G. Wells died.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—British and Canadian forces made contact south of Caen, France; all types of planes, including 1,250 heavy bombers, blasted retreating German forces in Normandy in the biggest aerial assault since D-Day; RAF planes flew over Warsaw dropping arms and ammunition to the beleaguered patriot army.

Kenya Reverts?

Secret Oaths Of Kikuyus Disquiet Luos

By STANLEY MEISLER, from Nairobi

The Kikuyus, dominant tribe in Kenya, are reportedly holding traditional, secret oathing ceremonies to unify their people—a further demonstration of how tribalism has gripped this country since the assassination of Tom Mboya.

Very little is known about the ceremonies beyond the fact that truckloads of young Kikuyu men continually head into the area surrounding the farm of President Jomo Kenyatta, who is a Kikuyu. They leave after the ceremonies.

The oathing is disquieting to other tribes in Kenya, for it is reminiscent of Mau Mau days. Though Kikuyus traditionally swear oaths to demonstrate loyalty, the best-known use of oathing came during the Mau Mau rebellion of the 1950s, when thousands of Kikuyus took oaths to unify themselves against British rule. The Mau Mau rebellion, with all its terrorism, was largely a Kikuyu rebellion. Some observers believe the current oathing represent no more than an attempt by Kikuyu politicians to insure that Kikuyus will vote for Kenyatta's party in the next election, expected sometime in the next 10 months.

But other observers see more significance in the oathing. They report that the oathing accelerated after the murder of Mboya. In their view, the Kikuyus have grown frightened over the way the assassination has united the Luo people, the fellow tribesmen of Mboya. Once divided, they now seem united in opposition to the government.

Anger Spurs Unity

These observers also attribute the show of Kikuyu unity to anger over the Luos stoning the car of Kenyatta at the funeral of Mboya in Nairobi.

Moreover, Kikuyus may be concerned over a possible increase in anti-Kikuyu feeling during the forthcoming trial of Nahashon Isaac Njenjga Njoroge, charged with the murder of Mboya. Njoroge is a Kikuyu.

Kenyatta's government has tried to ease the tribal frictions that have erupted since the assassination. But either the attempts have been to feeble or the tide of tribalism too powerful.

Even before police charged anyone with the murder, most Luos assumed that a Kikuyu had killed Mboya. This created a resurgence of tribal unity.

Many Luos, who had followed Mboya's lead and supported the government party, now decided that their allegiance must be transferred to the opposition, for it was led by an elder of the Luo tribe, Oginga Odinga.

The Kikuyus, with 2,000,000, are the largest tribe among Kenya's 10,000,000 people. They control the presidency, most of the key ministries and a disproportionate share of major civil servce posts. The Luos, who number 1,300,000 are the second largest.

President Kenyatta softened the rigid tribal lines somewhat by appointing another Luo, Joseph Odero Jowi, to take Mboya's place as minister of economic planning and development.

Odero Jowi, a close friend of Mboya, accepted, and the other Luo members of Kenyatta's cabinet decided to stay.

Their decision was brave, for the Luo cabinet members may have to face an angry Luo electorate at election time. By staying, however, the Luo cabinet members helped Kenyatta keep at least a semblance of unity.

Kenyatta Appeals

Kenyatta also has appealed to the people for unity and Bildad Kaggia, a Kikuyu who had been deputy leader of the opposition Kenya Peoples Union (KPU) resigned from the party to join Kenyatta's ruling Kenya African National Union (KANU).

Kaggia, a Mau Mau leader imprisoned with Kenyatta during the 1950s, had allied himself to the opposition KPU on ideological grounds.

Kaggia, though a Kikuyu, had felt that the Kikuyu-dominated KANU was not radical and socialist enough. A militant left-winger, he joined the Luo Odinga in 1965.

In a sense, Kaggia had been the Kikuyu counterpart of Mboya. Like Mboya, Kaggia refused to join the party that most of his tribesmen supported. So long as Mboya was in the government and aggia in the opposition, a case could be made that Kenya politics were not completely tribal.

As soon as he heard that Kaggia had resigned, Odinga, the leader of the opposition, claimed that Kaggia had been under pressure from people "who would prefer to see Kikuyu domination established and maintained in Kenya.

"We have heard" Odinga went on, "of people taking oaths to uphold Kikuyu dictatorship over other tribes."

Actually, outsiders here know almost nothing about the nature of the oaths taken by the Kikuyus.

This, of course, increases suspicion and fear here. Most outsiders get their idea of oaths from what they know of Mau Mau days.

Bloody Ceremony

Josiah Mwangi Kariuki, a Kikuyu member of parliament, described an oathing ceremony in his book, Mau Mau Detainee.

Kariuki wrote that he bit a piece of goat lung during the ceremony, received a dab of goat blood on his forehead, and then ate a piece of goat meat that had been smeared with drops of blood taken from cuts on the wrists of other Kikuyus in the ceremony.

In the oath, Kariuki, among other things, swore that "I shall go forward to fight for the land."

General China, the Mau Mau leader, described a more intensive ceremony in his recently published memoirs.

General China wrote that his soldiers would stand naked before the administrator of that oath, sip from a gourd that contained a potion made of milk, millet, goat bile and the fluid of a goat's eye, and swear, among other things, "If I surrender before we have gained independence, let this oath turn against me."

In Mau Mau days, stories of the oathing ceremonies, often exaggerated, persuaded most whites that the Mau Mau rebellion was a return to primitive, barbaric savagery. The whites failed to realize that Mau Mau was an organized African nationalist movement.

There are many questions about the current oaths. Are they administered to the Kikuyu masses, or do only Kikuyu leaders take them? Do they involve sacred Kikuyu symbols? What do the oath-takers swear?

Another puzzling question is the role of Kenyatta. The oaths have been administered near his home, for Kikuyu revere him as their great leader. But this does not mean he has taken part. In fact, according to the government press agency, Kenyatta continually issues appeals for national unity when Kikuyu delegations call on him.

At the same time, oathing could not take place if Kenyatta disapproved or discouraged it. Furthermore, the local newspapers have published photographs recently of Kenyatta dancing with traditional Kikuyu dancers—at a time when the situation cries out for him to play down his tribal role and assert himself as the leader of the whole country.

NASA Man-on-Mars Plan Runs Into Wide Opposition

BACKGROUND

Less than a month after the first men set foot on the Moon, the United States is plunging into serious debate on whether to set its sights on Mars in the 1980s.

By RUDY ABRAMSON, from Washington

Because of Apollo 11's success at landing on the Moon, there is a reasonable chance the nation will decide before the end of this year on a general plan for manned expedition to Mars.

★ ★ ★

To the people forcing the issue, it is a foregone conclusion that a manned visit to Mars will be the next step in the manned exploration of space. The question is when.

But opposition to a manned Mars flight is wide and deep. The race for the Moon became one of the nation's most controversial undertakings, and many of the leaders who supported it most questioned whether the United States should ever set another long-range space goal with a specific timetable.

Many of the country's most influential scientists, economists and politicians are braced to head off any attempt to launch a Man-to-Mars program in the mold of Apollo.

They argue the cost, under present circumstances, is unconscionable and the scientific value questionable. If the administration soon offers a solid proposal for sending men to Mars the debate could rage for years.

★ ★ ★

Until recent months, officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration led by its head, Dr. Thomas O. Paine, shunned serious public discussion of a manned Mars flight. Now they want to force the issue while the world applauds Apollo 11 and President Nixon uses the phrase "The spirit of Apollo."

Until the success of Apollo 11, it appeared it would be some years before plans to land men on Mars could be soberly considered.

★ ★ ★

But a rough plan calling for a launch as early as 1981 has already been drawn up and top NASA officials have decided now is the time to talk about it.

Whether to set a firm goal for manned flights to Mars is not a decision to be made by NASA. It rests with the President, who will have to convince Congress.

★ ★ ★

Though Nixon has given every indication he does not plan to see the space program cut back, Paine makes it clear he is not speaking for the president when he talks of launching men to Mars in 1981.

His description of the Mars mission is based on a study conducted under Dr. George C. Mueller, NASA's associate administrator for manned spaceflight, and Dr. Wernher von Braun, director of the Marshall Spaceflight Centre.

★ ★ ★

It envisions the launch of two nuclear-powered ships from Earth orbit, carrying as many as a dozen men to orbit above Mars. Six of them would shuttle back and forth to the surface in a reuseable taxi. They would stay in the vicinity of Mars for about 80 days, spending four to six weeks exploring the surface.

The trip would take about two years and provide for a swing past Venus on the way home.

★ ★ ★

The arguments for going to Mars are essentially the same which led to the decision to land men on the moon.

Proponents of a manned flight to Mars mention national prestige, technological advancement and science as its primary justification.

Apollo 11 Crew Reticent and Shy

They're Reluctant Heroes

By NICHOLAS CHRISS
From Houston

Seldom has the United States seen three more unlikely heroes than astronauts Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins.

And per haps there never have been any men more reluctant to assume the cloak of national heroism than the reticent and shy Apollo 11 crew.

★ ★ ★

People who know the astronauts — some of their neighbors for example and their colleagues in the space program — take a rather dim view of the exhausting cross-country trip the crew members will begin today.

The astronauts, aside from all the publicity, stand a chance of becoming ill during the strenuous days ahead of them.

★ ★ ★

Their doctor, Charles Berry, said earlier this week the three men stood an excellent chance of picking up some illness because of the contrast of public contact after spending 21 days of germ-free quarantine in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory here.

For the reluctant heroes in some ways the trip may be more trying than their perilous journey to the Moon.

★ ★ ★

One-half hour after their first press conference Tuesday the trio was whisked off to a huge banquet in downtown Houston attended by local dignitaries and about 1,000 others.

Today they fly from Houston to New York to Chicago and finally to Los Angeles for the presidential dinner. The astronauts are expected to make some impromptu remarks at the banquet.

Saturday the astronauts are to take part in a parade in downtown Houston and a huge party at the Astrodome that night.

Making speeches could prove to be one of Armstrong's toughest assignments, for he is not given to small talk.

There will be remarks to deliver at the United Nations in New York today, responses to Mayors John Lindsay and Richard Daley and to top it all off, two hours of televised dining along with about 1,500 other persons at the Los Angeles banquet.

★ ★ ★

It is unlikely that Armstrong will ever project the public relations image of heroism that exuded naturally from John Glenn.

During the hour-and-a-half press conference Tuesday, the three astronauts had little difficulty responding to the technical queries about their trip.

But it was something else, almost painful, when they were compared to heroes, asked to place philosophical meanings on their feat and generally put in the mold of heroes.

★ ★ ★

"We've had very little time for meditation," Armstrong replied. And it was Armstrong who reminded reporters that the privacy the astronauts have in the future "kind of depends on you."

This observation brought the biggest applause of the day for the three men from hudreds of space program employees jammed into the auditorium here.

Astronauts Aldrin, Armstrong and Collins beat hasty retreat following yesterday's ordeal by press conference.

Ghosts Force Ban on Games

By SABA RATNAM, from Singapore

The ghosts of British and Japanese soldiers who fell on a playing field in central Malaya during the war have forced the headmaster to ban all games at this school.

The trouble began recently when six girls training for the annual athletics competition collapsed on the hurdling track. Two hours later 16 girls taking part in a relay became hysterical and began muttering and moaning in English and Japanese.

Said the headmaster, Khairul Faizi: "English they know—it's taught here. But what puzzles me is how they speak Japanese."

First the police were called in. When they proved of little use Faizi sent for a Malayan medicine man who went into a trance and then announced:

"The girls are upsetting the ghosts of some soldiers who died here in December, 1941. They want the training stopped."

At first Faizi ignored the man. But a few days later when four students were taken seriously ill soon after crossing the field he banned the sports meeting.

"There is little else I can do," he said. "I would never have believed this possible if it had not happened in my own school and under my own eyes. I hope the spirits keep the promise they gave the medicine man and leave my students alone."

Odd happenings have taken place in quite a number of schools that were caught in the line of fire as the British retreated down the Malay peninsula during the Second World War.

Oak Bay Election Corner

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

The Liberal leader recently stated that a Liberal Government would abolish the raising of funds for hospital construction at the municipal level; would abolish regional hospital boards and would finance construction out of general revenue. This is obviously an election carrot dangled before the noses of the voters, since it avoids mentioning that the required money would still have to be raised by the Provincial Government, inevitably via increased taxation of you, the taxpayers. Also unmentioned, is the fact that Regional Boards as of July 1st, 1969, have committed themselves to $34 million borrowing and have taken on hospital debts of $28 million, which were outstanding by municipalities when the Regional Boards were formed. Under the proposed Liberal policy, the Provincial Government would be obligated to assume these debts of $62 million.

Even more important than the money is the fact that if the Provincial Government were to assume responsibility of the financing, it is inevitable that it would very soon assume 100% control of the running of local hospitals. For indeed the man who pays the piper calls the tune. It is my very firm conviction that the present high quality of service provided by our local hospitals, results from the conscientious, dedicated service of hospital board members, the vast majority of whom are now elected or appointed by the local hospital society and the local municipalities. My firm policy will always be to support the running of local hospitals by the existing boards of management, which are autonomous and devoid of control by the Provincial Government. This present, proven worthwhile system can only survive if the citizens at the municipal level continue to raise part of the financing.

Quebec Clings to Trading

Worried about loss of business to the Toronto and Vancouver stock exchanges, the Quebec Securities Commission is introducing new regulations in September to steer Quebec trading to the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges.

Many orders originating in Quebec now are being processed by Montreal brokerage houses to the Toronto exchange, where, they claim, there is a wider and better market in most securities, and where they can get a better fill.

As a result the volume of trading on the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges has been dwindling while sales on other Canadian exchanges have been rising.

'RIDICULOUS'

"Restrictions of this sort are ridiculous," said a local representative of one national brokerage firm. "We place our orders where the best market is, and we feel that is our duty to our clients."

He added that this new form of Quebec separatism could hurt only one person—the Quebec investor, who might have to take a poorer price or take longer to make his bargain.

HIT BY CHARTERS

Expansion of the charter flight cut rates together with higher costs, airport congestion and other difficulties are hitting hard at the profit and loss accounts of the leading schedule flight airlines.

Several U.S. airlines that made handsome profits a year ago are now operating at a loss.

Pan-Am is a typical case. It made $17,630,000 (52 cents a share) in the second quarter of 1968; in the same quarter this year it had a net loss of $1,881,000 (5 cents a share).

For the future Pan Am says it has some specific concerns but on balance is confident. The advent of the Jumbo jets are the big hope of most of the airlines. They are the ones expected to bring in a new air travel public through their economic scale of fares.

CPI MAKES CHANGES

Canadian Pacific Investments made some new investments during the first half of 1969, according to the semi-annual report.

These included an increase of $10,300,000 in the holdings of the common stock of Great Lakes Paper, $7,500,000 in shares of the Investors Group, and an additional investment in the shares of Marathon Realty amounting to $4,500,000. Marathon is the real estate wing of the Canadian Pacific Railway group of companies.

On the disposal side, Canadian Pacific Investments sold holdings of Huron and Erie Mortgage for $6,500,000, a deal on which a profit of $2,600,000 was made.

PHONE EXTENDABLE

The latest authority to go into the extendable bond for its new financing is Manitoba Telephone.

It is issuing 8 per cent bonds dated Sept. 15, 1974, that may be later extended to Sept. 15, 1989. The offering price of 98% gives a yield of 8.31 per cent on the short term and 8.125 on the long.

□

BETTER EXPECTED

Second quarter of 1969 brought a net profit of $1,554,000 (24.3 cents a share) to New Imperial Mines. In the first quarter net earnings were $640,000 (10 cents a share).

The mill at the company's mining operation near Whitehorse now is operating at more than 2,500 tons a day, and a further rise in tonnage is expected in the third quarter.

□

SULPHUR PRICE BLAMED

A deterioration in the price for sulphur is blamed by Jefferson Lake Petrochemicals for a decline in net profits in the first half of 1969 to $1,744,976 (65 cents a share) from $2,064,412 (78 cents) a year ago.

Since sulphur prices were still on a downtrend at the close of the second quarter, president David Chalmer said revenues, income and cash flow will be further affected for the balance of the year.

□

PACIFIC RESULTS

An increase of 5 per cent in operating profit and cash generation is reported for the first half of 1969 by Pacific Petroleums.

The net profit of $8,682,000 (41 cents a share) included a non-recurring gain of $1,694,000 from the sale of investments, and compared with $8,584,000 (36 cents) in the corresponding half of 1968.

LOANS FOR MOBILES

The U.S. federal home loan bank board is proposing to make money available for the purchase of mobile homes.

The loans would be for a 10-year or less term and the maximum loan would be 100 per cent of the manufacturers' costs plus freight costs.

Savings and Loans Associations have been pressing for authority to lend money on mobiles.

Consignment Sale of Gas 'Detrimental to Public'

TORONTO (CP) — W. O. Twaits, president of Imperial Oil Ltd., said Tuesday he "can't understand" the concern of the federal restrictive trade practices commission over consignment selling.

A commission report recommended that a court order prohibit continuation of such action by gasoline dealers.

It termed the practice "detrimental to the public interest." The commission found that a group of Sudbury service station operators acted in concert to raise gasoline prices in their area in 1964. But rather than recommending prosecution of the operators, it said continuation of such actions as consignment selling by dealers to control retail gasoline prices should be prohibited by court order.

Twaits said consignment selling is entered into voluntarily by dealers when they need to protect their profit margins. The company takes over the dealers' inventory and pays him a commission.

In return, the company sets both the wholesale and the retail gasoline price.

SMALL PART

"It has nothing to do with price-fixing," Twaits said. "Imperial's consignment selling had nothing to do with the total situation in Sudbury."

Twaits said consignment selling is not a large part of Imperial's selling in Ontario, although he could not give definite figures.

R. J. Benson, co-ordinator of retail sales for Shell Canada Ltd. said Shell, also named by the commission as selling on consignment, does not favor the practice.

PROTECTION NEEDED

"It's not the normal method of selling gasoline," he said. "We use it only when the price situation is such that dealers' profit margins must be protected.

Benson said there should be some technique available to the industry to protect its dealers. One method, already considered by the oil companies, would be to grant dealers allowances. But Benson said this conflicts with the Combines Act, which prohibits vendors from selling to competing dealers in an area.

Spokesmen for Gulf Canada Ltd., also named in the commission's report as engaging in consignment selling in Sudbury, would not comment directly on the recommendation to end it.

Market Aids Farmers

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The Common Market Tuesday suspended for two years its uniform agricultural price in order to protect farmers from France's sudden devaluation of the franc.

The decision in effect isolates the French market behind a much-despised system of export taxes and import subsidies, which the Common Market abolished in 1966.

The decision was taken to protect other Common Market farmers from unfair competition from devalued French agricultural products and prevent spiralling food prices in France.

Devaluation Reaction

Wide Labor Unrest Hints Paris Storm

PARIS (Reuters) — Leaders of the largest French labor union federation have warned the government to change its policies if it wants to prevent unrest by workers angered by Friday's devaluation of the franc.

The Secretary of the Communist-led CGT federation, Jean-Louis Moynot, said Tuesday after a meeting with labor Minister Joseph Fontanet: "Nothing that we have heard is the kind of thing to calm our fears."

STORM ON WAY

He said that if the government does not go beyond Fontanet's position Tuesday, the return to work after the summer vacation could be stormy.

The CGT delegation called on Fontanet after a statement from the Communist party urging a struggle to defend the workers' purchasing power.

The party's daily newspaper L'Humanite said the 12.5-percent devaluation would automatically raise prices and reduce the purchasing power of workers' wages and savings.

DISCUSS EFFECTS

Fontanet, who will meet other union groups today, discussed the effects of the devaluation with leaders of the white-collar workers' federation earlier Tuesday.

Their leader, Corentin Calvez, told reporters after the 45-minute meeting: "The minister heard us without giving us a reply except that he thinks prices are only going to rise by 0.7 per cent."

All trade union groups are pressing for new wage talks following negotiations which broke down in early spring.

On the foreign exchange market here Tuesday, the franc closed in a slightly weaker position than Monday.

Dealers reported the market was erratically active and the Bank of France was having to give only light support to the devalued currency.

New Capital-Raising Scheme Ready for Commonwealth

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of the financially-troubled Commonwealth Trust Co. group of companies will be asked Friday to consider a proposal to raise $2,500,00 in new capital, a spokesman for the company managing Commonwealth's affairs said Tuesday.

John Richardson, vice-president of Phoenix Management Services Ltd., which took over last month from government-appointed receiver A. D. Peter Stanley, made the statement in reply to Premier Bennett, who said Monday he doubted Commonwealth could qualify for a government loan.

The premier said Commonwealth has not complied with the terms of legislation under which it could qualify for a $3,000,000 government loan and "it looks to me they never will comply."

Under the legislation, Commonwealth must raise $3,000,000 itself to qualify for the loan.

"Certainly to date the capital required has not been subscribed as was originally contemplated by the shareholders," Mr. Richardson said. "However, under the terms of the contract, Phoenix will advise the directors of Commonwealth on Aug. 15 that they consider a financing to be feasible."

He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, distribution of $5,760,000 to shareholders of two Commonwealth mutual funds placed in receivership last December was authorized in the British Columbia Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Gordon Rae approved an application by Mr. Stanely, receiver of Diversified Income Shares, series A and B, to turn the money over to the trustee, Commonwealth Trust, for distribution to 3,930 shareholders.

Largest amount to be received by a shareholder is $100,000 but average will be about $2,000.

Total amount in the fund was $7,400,000 but there is a holdback of $1,640,000 relating to securities where investigation is not complete.

Woodward Foundation

Tax Move by Province?

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Sun says the provincial government will tax money allocated by the P. A. Woodward Foundation for medical research and education.

The evening newspaper quotes an unnamed foundation official as saying the government intends to tax the estate of the late department store owner before any of his money is turned over to the foundation.

The tax, "on a large sum of money," will be about 40 per cent, the official said.

The Woodward estate was filed for probate at $4,566,466 in December, 1968.

★ ★ ★

Previously, money slated for foundations of this type has not been taxed under the provincial succesion duties legislation.

A foundation trustee who declined to be named said the provincial government has the right to decide whether or not a foundation of this type is a charitable institution.

In this case, he said, Premier W. A. C. Bennett, who is B.C.'s finance minister, decided the foundation should not receive the estate until it is taxed.

He said the foundation has adhered to all legal regulations and the move by the premier came as a surprise to both foundation trustees and UBC which has received $4,500,000 in grants from the foundation in the last seven years.

School Taxes Would Die

who were introduced by Victoria NDP candidate Peter Bunn as "a remarkably non-partisan" group which included teachers "of other political stripes."

Bill Broadley, president-elect of GVTA, asked how local control would be maintained over education if homeowners paid no direct school taxes.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Berger replied that taxpayers now pay heavily for schools and have little local autonomy. An NDP government, he said, would ensure greater local control by "writing it into the legislation."

Mrs. Eileen Dailly, NDP candiate for Burnaby North and the party's education critic in the last Legislature, said Vancouver taxpayers pay 70 per cent of school costs and are still fighting for autonomy.

Mrs. Kory Regan, a past president of the teachers' group, noted that Saanich NDP candidate Don Johannessen had stated that the next government must spend more on education "or we're in trouble."

★ ★ ★

She said Social Credit devotes 32 per cent of the provincial budget to education and wanted to know how great a percentage the NDP would spend.

Mr. Berger replied that the education spending in the current provincial budget amounts to 25 per cent of the total when the homeowner grant is deducted. He said in Manitoba 40 per cent of the budget goes to education and in Ontario the figure is 50 per cent.

On top of that, he claimed, the government holds back money appropriated for school construction by the Legislature and at the end of the fiscal year puts it inot the surplus fund.

The NDP leader charged

that the Bennett government has not taken advantange of $35,000,000 in federal grants which are available for the construction of new vocational schools.

Mr. Johannessen said his reference to trouble ahead was in connection with this need for new vocational and regional college facilities to train young people to fill jobs in secondary industry.

Norman Wright, president of the Alma Mater Society at the University of Victoria, who was also invited, wanted to know if the NDP would institute a policy of "universal post secondary education" for two years at levels from vocational to university studies.

The NDP's first concern, Mr. Berger said, was for every young person to have the opportunity of completing their secondary education. "We must make sure the 50 per cent of our students who are dropouts now complete high school," he added. "After that they are old enough to decide for themselves what they want to do."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Broadley questioned the 50 per cent dropout figure, arguing that the B.C. Teacher's Federation says that 79 per cent of all students who enter Grade One in this province graduate from Grade 12.

He told reporters that the NDP endorses all eight points publicized in the B.C. Teachers Federation "Red Apple" campaign but added the use of the federation's symbol would be left up to individual candidates.

"I don't think the presence or absence of this symbol should be an issue," Mr. Berger said.

Some Wouldn't Fit—Berger

people have given long service to the province. They have got to be given equivalent salaries in other positions. There is not going to be any wholesale firings.

"But I think you have to have people who want to see the policies implemented that you believe in. You can't have people at the top echelon of the civil service working against policies that we want to bring in."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Berger avoided naming any present government officials, using as an example Col. Donald McGuigan who retired from the $20,500-a-year post of Liquor Control Board chairman last April 1.

"An NDP government is going to change liquor laws which means we will have neighborhood pubs and allow corner grocery stores and supermarkets to sell bottled beer. We believe the public is entitled to this.

"But that means we must have a man who believes in neighborhood pubs." You can't have a Col. McGuigan administering New Democratic policy in the field of liquor laws. Col. McGuigan is one of those who would not fit into an NDP administration."

Oil Workers Pickets

Injunction Stops Bus Service Block

Bus service was restored in Victoria at 2 p.m. Tuesday after picketing oil workers kept buses in B.C Hydro's Garbally Road garage for more than eight hours.

Pickets also shut down buses in Vancouver and stopped a Canadian Pacific ferry from leaving Vancouver for Nanaimo.

Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union picketed bus lines in a bid to break a deadlock in their 12-week strike against six major oil companies — Imperial, Gulf, Standard, Shell, Texaco and Home.

SERVICE STATIONS

Oil workers also put up picket lines Monday around a number of service stations in southern B.C.

About 60 buses were halted in Victoria when drivers, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, would not cross the picket lines about 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Pickets left after a court injunction was read to them about 1:15 p.m., and the buses started moving at 2. Service was completely restored by 3 p.m.

Line trucks at the garage also were unable to get out, and a power outage darkened a third of the Uplands from about 5:30 to 9:30 a.m. A private electrical contractor was hired to restore service.

In Vancouver, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said he is reluctant to intervene in the oil workers' dispute.

"I'm reluctant to force a mediation officer on parties who are unwilling to accept him. Before the dispute began and right up to this hour both management and labor have been offered mediation but neither side seems interested in accepting it," he said.

Mr. Peterson blasted the oil workers for aiming their pickets at the transit system because it hurts people who depend most on buses rather than cars, such as old age pensioners.

Bennett Hunts For Votes

Stopping in West Vancouver beauty parlor while campaigning, Premier Bennett sought vote of local resident Helen Goldie, left. She and sister Mrs. Robert Coltman of California said they found premier "nice." Nominations close today for Aug. 27 vote, with Socreds and NDP already fielding full slates of 55 each, plus 53 Liberals, four independents, four Communists and one Conservative. Registered voters total was announced as 1,151,806, or 31.8 per cent more than for last election in 1966.—(CP)

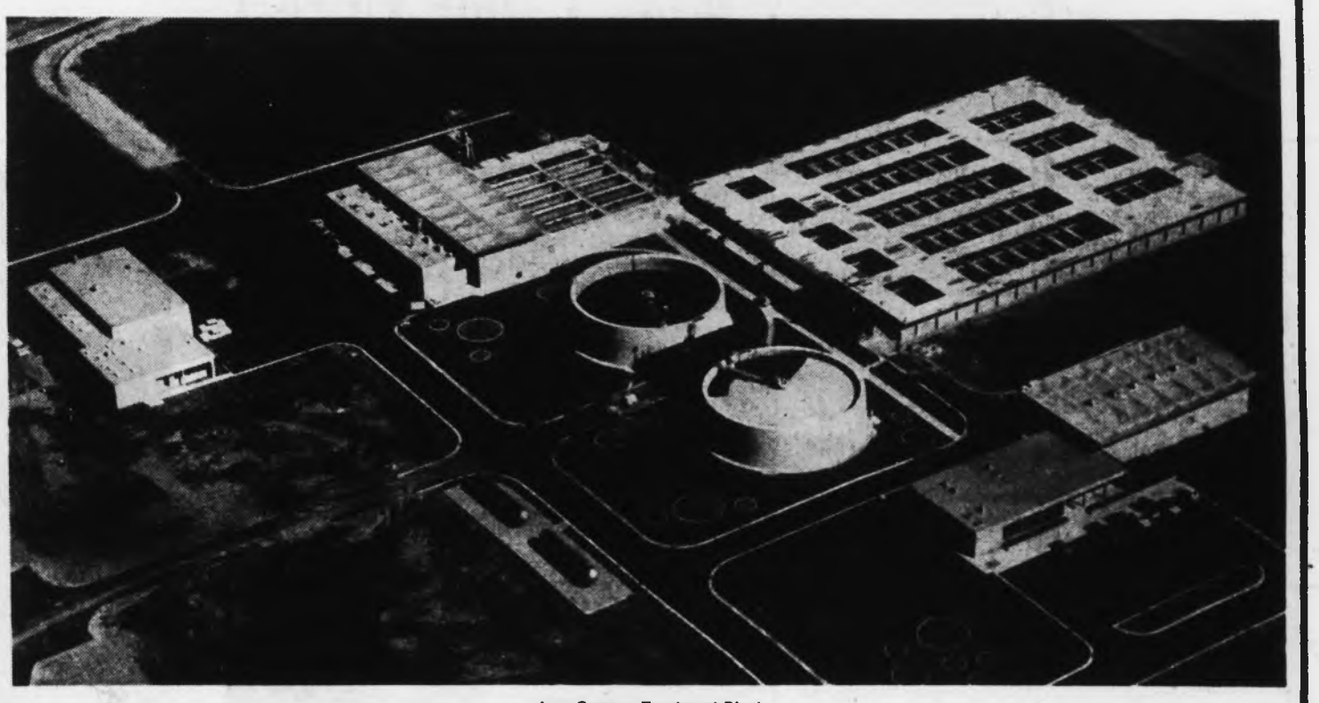
HEALTH BRANCH POLICY CONCERNING SEWAGE TREATMENT



Iona Sewage Treatment Plant.

In the interest of public health in British Columbia, all proposals for sewage treatment and disposal in this province require submission for approval under the "Health Act" to the Health Branch, Department of Health Services and Hospital Insurance.

These proposals can be generally approved:

- if sewage is to be directed to an existing approved treatment plant;
- if there is to be only a rearrangement of existing sewers but no increase in the size of sewer;
- if there is to be no additional sewage discharge.

These proposals can be conditionally approved:

- if the Council (owner, corporation, etc.) making the proposal provides a firm commitment that treatment facilities will be constructed by an acceptable date. A schedule of construction must be submitted and approved by the Division of Public Health Engineering and by the Pollution Control Board.

These proposals can not be approved:

- if there is to be additional sewage discharge without primary treatment.

These regulations are made to protect the health and safety of the people of British Columbia.

'Bridge to Human Dignity'

Nixon Pushes Job Training

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon proposed Tuesday a $2,300,000,000-a-year program to train more than 1,000,000 Americans annually for jobs—a program he said would "build a bridge to human dignity."

He also proposed giving the states and cities much of the authority for running the federal program.

As a part of his New Federalism concept of sharing state, local and federal power, Nixon sent to the United States Congress a manpower training act to streamline and make more flexible the welter of existing job-training programs.

MORE FOR JOBS

Labor Secretary George Shultz, in a briefing, said Nixon is proposing to add 150,000 Americans to the current job-training rolls at an extra cost of $400,000,000 a year.

Most of the additional training would go to welfare recipients if both the manpower bill and Nixon's welfare legislation are enacted. The welfare bill requires most welfare recipients to take job training.

The manpower legislation also would boost job-training funds 10 per cent if the United States unemployment rate rose to 4.5 per cent for three straight months. It now is 3.6 per cent.

This, Shultz said, was to allay fears that many Americans might lose their jobs in Nixon's efforts to slow the United States economy enough to cool inflation.

The bill also provides for a computerized national job bank to match the unemployed with job openings.

It would equalize living allowances for different job-training programs, which now vary, to keep the unemployed from shopping around for the best allowance instead of for the most suitable job training.

Welfare recipients would receive, in lieu of the job-training allowance, a special incentive of $30 a month in addition to welfare payments.

States and cities would take over much of the authority for planning and spending federal money for manpower programs heretofore largely run from Washington, but the labor department would retain over-all responsibility.

"The secretary of labor will provide guidelines and national priorities, review and approve annual state plans of service, and evaluate performance of state and area manpower service systems," the legislation says.

Shultz said the bill provides for a gradual shift of authority to states and cities and that the labor department will retain power to run job training in any state or city that does not meet federal criteria.

STATE BENEFITS

A state would get 25 per cent of its federal funds when it proves capable of comprehensive manpower planning. Another 66.6 per cent of the state allotment would be turned over when it sets up an operating manpower agency, a state planning coucil and machinery to distribute the money through city or area agencies.

The state will receive the rest of its federal money when it "meets objective standards of exemplary performance in planning and carrying out its manpower service system," the legislation says.

Radar Satellite Aid to Airlines

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A busy multi-purpose satellite with booms almost the length of a football field rocketed into the right orbit Tuesday but ended up on the wrong side of earth.

"We don't see any problem" project officials said. However, they predicted it will take up to 20 days to shift the ATS V — fifth applications technology satellite — from a postition over the Bay of Bengal near India back around the world to its desired station over the Pacific 600 miles west of South America.

ATS V is loaded with 13 experiments, including one that could help make transocean aircraft travel safer in the 1970s.

One of the communications experiments is to test the feasibility of relaying high-frequency radio signals via satellite to pinpoint the location of aircraft over wide ocean areas out of range of ground-based radar, with an eye toward safer air traffic control in the 1970s.

Another, called a millimetre wave experiment, was designed to see whether radio frequencies high than any yet used in space communications could be put to work in future television-relay or military satellites.

New Government Sympathetic

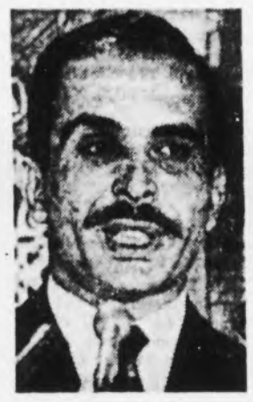
Guerrillas Bend Hussein

From UPI, AP

Jordan's King Hussein Tuesday announced a change of government that political sources said was a clear sign of submission to Arab guerrillas.

At about the same time, while Lebanon called in the United Nations for a Security Council session to consider charges of Israeli aggression, Israel's Premier Golda Meir told Lebanon it could not escape responsibility for Arab guerrillas's operations against her country.

The new Jordanian cabinet was formed by veteran Jordanian politician and former premier Bahjat Talhouni. Seven of the ministers—about half of the cabinet—were guerrilla supporters, the sources said.



Hussein

Guerrillas have demanded greater support from the Jordanian government. Many guerrilla bases are near Jordan's long frontier with Israel and the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Many Israeli raids against Jordan since the June, 1967, Middle East war were in retaliation for guerrilla attacks on Israeli-held areas from bases in Jordan.

The new cabinet also contained two leaders of East Jerusalem deported from their homes by Israeli occupation authorities for inciting resistance to Israeli rule in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, the sources said.

Royal decrees simultaneously announced the resignation of outgoing Premier Abdel Monem Rifai and the formation of a new cabinet under Talhouni. There was no further official explanation.

The Lebanese UN request was read in the council meeting already under way on the question of South West Africa, and a meeting was immediately set for 2 p.m. (PDT) today.

Lebanese charge d'affaires Iahya Mahmassani said there was "premeditated and unprovoked aggression committed by Israel against civilian villages in southern Lebanon."

RAID COMMENT

He described the situation as "endangering the peace and security of Lebanon."

Mrs. Meir issued the warning in a speech commenting on an Israeli air strike Monday against Arab commando camps around Mount Hermon in southeast Lebanon which prompted unofficial casualty estimates in Beirut, ranging up to eight persons killed and 21 wounded.

The premier's speech, reported by the Israeli state radio, said the air raids were aimed at the guerrillas, not at Lebanon.

REPRISAL FEARED

The Lebanese government has tried to discourage Arab guerrilla outfits from operating on Lebanese soil for fear of massive Israeli reprisals, such as the commando attack on Beirut's International Airport Dec. 28 last which destroyed 13 planes.

Beirut has insisted that the guerrillas operating in the foothills of Mount Hermon were sent in by Syria.

Royal Columbian Hospital

Expansion Gets Green Light

VANCOUVER (CP)—Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Tuesday authorized a renovation and expansion program for Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster which he said would cost more than $10,000,000.

He said the hospital, which has been long plagued by inadequate facilities, may build a new structure to replace a 1912 acute care wing, upgrade a wing built in 1950, and provide more beds and services.

Sixty per cent of the funds required will be put up by the provincial government, Mr. Loffmark said, and 40 per cent will have to be raised by the Regional Hospital District.

The program authorized by Mr. Loffmark includes adding 100 acute care beds to provide a minimum of 500 beds, provision of 150 extended care beds in a separate unit, and an assessment of special services including intensive care.

Provision of such services as renal dialysis, metabolic service, nuclear medicine, electrodiagnostic services, laboratory and radiology expansion, would be undertaken in consultation with the B.C. Medical Association, Mr. Loffmark said.

Provision of the additional services would bring the bed capacity to more than 650.

Mboya Death Plot Hinted at Trial

NAIROBI (UPI) — A high court Tuesday heard evidence suggesting a large-scale conspiracy lay behind the slaying of Kenya's economic planning minister Tom Mboya, July 5.

An African policeman told the court that when Isaac Njoroge, the man charged with gunning down Mboya, was arrested he said, "Why pick on me. Why not the big man?"

* * *

Njoroge, arrested four days after the assassination which sparked tribal rioting, showed little emotion during the second day of a hearing which will determine whether he stands trial for murder. The policeman, Francis Okomba, said Njoroge refused to tell him who the "big man" was.

Lots Altered In Saanich

Saanich council at a public hearing Monday night unanimously approved rezoning of a ½-acre property at 294 Prospect Lake Road owned by the Good Shepherd Mission for church and play school use.

Council also approved rezoning of 20 acres north of Lucas Avenue and Borden Street for private school use by St. Margaret's School, providing the health officer approved the sewage disposal methods and access through the property was arranged for.

Next game: Tonight — New Westminster at VICTORIA, Memorial Arena, 8:30 p.m.

Victoria Shamrocks were only four steps away from playoff elimination in the Western Lacrosse Association when they left for Vancouver Tuesday afternon.

Following a 15-7 trimming handed out by the Carlings, the Shamrocks go into tonight's game against New Westminster at Memorial Arena only three strides away from clinching last place.

Any combination of Vancouver victories and Victoria defeats which add up to three will leave the playoffs a Mainland affair. Shamrocks are eight points behind Carlings with six games left.

Brian Davidson, borrowed for the game from junior ranks, led the way in scuttling the Shamrocks by scoring five goals. He scored twice in each of the last two periods to take over from Bob Salt, who scored the first Vancouver goal and assisted on the next four.

BUILT LONG LEAD

Vancouver led 9-1 after the second period and it was only in the final 20 minutes that Victoria came to life, with Ken Alexander and Dennis Somner scoring twice each.

Art Dickinson, Bill Rawson, Dan Cameron and Tony Ciolfitto scored two goals each for Vancouver. Pete Bourchier and Salt added singles.

HAMILTON SOLID

Vancouver goalkeeper Don Hamilton played a strong game, making 35 saves and picking up three assists.

Alexander paced Victoria with three goals and an assist. Somner followed with two goals while Nirmal Dillon and Mike Beaulac rounded out the scoring.

Goalkeeper George Grover blocked 36 shots as the Vancouver forwards rolled around the loose-checking Shamrock defence.

Expos Shock Leaders To Tighten NL Race

Montreal Expos took a hand in major league baseball's best race on Tuesday, confounding Cincinnati Reds by sweeping a doubleheader, 8-3 and 5-2.

The stunning turn of events left the Reds, who had won five in a row and 13 of their previous 15 games, only three games ahead of the fifth-place Houston Astros in the National League West.

In between are Atlanta Braves, rained out but moving within two games, and Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants, both Tuesday winners and both a half game behind the Braves.

Rookie Steve Renko, winning for the second time, stopped the hard-hitting Reds with six hits and hit a home run in the first game. Bill Stoneman, with late help from Roy Face, won the second game.

Coco Laboy, who drove in a total of five runs, got the Expos started with run-producing hits in the first inning of both games.

Outfielder Curt Blefary, who spent last season with Baltimore Orioles, was outstanding in helping the Astros beat New York Mets for the eighth straight time, this time by 8-7.

THREE-RUN HOMER

He climaxed a four-run sixth inning with a three-run homer which gave Astros a 6-5 lead, then made an outstanding play to cut off an eighth-inning rally a run short of tying.

Gaylord Perry struggled all the way for the Giants but scattered 10 hits well enough for a 6-3 decision over Pittsburgh Pirates. Most of the help Perry needed came from Jim Davenport, who drove in three runs with three hits in the six innings he played.

WIN WITH RALLY

A four-run eighth inning brought the Dodgers a 5-2 win over St. Louis Cardinals, who dropped back a game in the Eastern Division race.

The Dodgers erupted against Joe Hoerner, who had been sent in to protect the 2-1 lead given Ray Washburn.

Singles by Willie Crawford and Willie Davis, a walk to Bill Sudakis after a sacrifice bunt and Manny Mota's sacrifice fly tied the score. Jim Lefebvre untied it with a three-run homer.

Ferguson Jenkins boosted Chicago Cubs' lead over the Cardinals back to eight and a half games by pitching a six-hit, 4-0 shutout over San Diego Padres.

Minnesota Twins and Oakland Athletics, a game apart in the American League West, both lost.

YANKS STOP TWINS

New York's streaking Yankees, who have won five straight and nine of 10, stopped the Twins, 10-3, and Paul Blair's ninth-inning single brought the Orioles a 4-3 win over the Athletics.

The Yankees exploded for eight runs in the seventh inning, a rally which included triples by Gene Michael and Horace Clarke and two bases-loaded walks.

ALEC MERRIMAN

When Roy Smith started in the flasher business 18 years ago, there were only two other flashers on the market . . . the Gibbs and the commercial Blackfish Sound flasher. Today there are nearly 30 different kinds of flashers available to sports and commercial anglers.

But the Roy Smith three-sided flasher is still the most popular flasher used in Vancouver Island waters. Now Smith has come up with a revolutionary new roller flasher, especially designed for those who want a revolving flasher with a minimum of pull on the line.

"Flashers are coming back strong again with the return of schools of small herring bait," Smith says.

"The ballups are coming back again," Smith added. Ballups are the black balls of herring bait which occur close to the surface when fish drive the bait up and gulls and diving ducks work on the bait from the surface.

The small bait crowds in a ball for safety and the lucky angler who spots a ballup, by the birds working over it, can speed through the area and scoop up fresh bait with a net, even a salmon net.

"A flasher represents a feeding salmon slashing at minnows. A salmon will turn and come back for the crippled fish, or another lazier salmon will steal the wounded bait, but let another fish do the work of crippling them with a mighty slash," says Smith.

Commerical fishermen who make their living fishing use flashers almost exclusively, he noted. "But there are lots of pros and cons voiced among sportsmen. Some say they catch more fish without a flasher, but I think the commercial fishermen should know," Smith added.

"I think a flasher draws fish. I think you should always have one out," says Rhys Davis.

Smith said he thinks some anglers are starting to use too long leaders with their flashers. A leader that is too long gets away from the fundamentals of a flasher, he says.

He believes maximum length of a leader should be 48 inches. He uses 42 to 44-inch leaders with both his flasher models and never uses anything as short as 18 inches, as some recommend for coho. "I use 24 inch to 30-inch leaders for coho," he added.

The theory is that a coho is a faster fish than a chinook and will take a faster-moving lure. The shorter leader gives the bait more whip as the flasher dodges back and forth or rolls.

To change the action of a flasher, bend the lure end to make it revolve or whip faster and the fine end to stop the revolving or slow down the action.

Roy Smith's new Roller Dodger will fish the conventional way of whipping back and forth. Or, when you speed up the boat, it will roll.

"I made it for the commercial fishermen who kept asking me for a revolving flasher," Smith said. "I worked on it for two years. I was trying for a revolutionary design to get away from the usual flasher pull. I think I have accomplished that with the new triangular shape."

The new flasher has a narrow head where the main line is tied. This narrow head, Smith explains, gets away from the excessive pull of other revolving flashers.

The lead to the lure is off to one corner of the triangular shaped flasher, so as to throw the lure in a wider arc.

The new Roller Dodger may be used with baits in Teaser holder, Krippled Octopus and Hootchy Kootchy lures, Flashtails and Myl-R flies.

Ball bearing swivels stop the line from winding when the flasher revolves.

The flasher is made of chrome-type highly polished stainless steel from England. It has so little drag it may be used with 20-pound test line and on a light rod. Any lighter line might wrap a little, Smith warns.

The new flasher has been on the market since June, but highliners in local waters have been testing it with considerable success for about six months.

Last year, Roy Smith and his fishing partner, Verne Palliser, tested a similar experimental flasher in Bligh Island and Head Bay waters of Muchalat Inlet and had some spectacular success with tyee salmon.

They used 42 to 44-inch leaders, the roller flasher, specially-cut long herring strip and 75 feet of line with two pounds of weight, or 100 feet of line and one and one-half pounds of weight.

Tonight's interlocking Canadian Football League game between B.C. Lions and Ottawa Rough Riders will be telecast over Channel 8 starting at 5 p.m., Victoria time. It can also be heard over Radio CFAX (1070) or CKNW (980), starting at the same time.

Little League Opener Losers Look Good Enough to Win

Proof that Little League baseball made a forward move this year when it changed to double-knockout playoffs was there to be seen Tuesday in the first two games of the Canadian final at Hampton Park.

In past years, the Quebec-Maritimes champions from Valleyfield and the Ontario champions from Galt would have nothing left after one appearance except a meaningless consolation game.

They were the Tuesday losers, but the two games failed to give any real indication of which of the four clubs might be the best, and it wouldn't be surprising if the eventual winner came out of the losers' side.

DEPTH WILL DECIDE

Valleyfield lost the first game, 2-3, to Edmonton Hardisty, the prairie champions, and Galt was beaten, 2-0, by Vancouver Collingwood in the evening.

As the scores indicate, it wouldn't have taken much to reverse the result. Now, as it should, pitching depth and consistency will decide.

All four clubs got steady, complete-game pitching with, perhaps, Doug Cochrane of the B.C. champions the most-impressive thrower.

An 11-year-old, 80-pound right-hander, Cochrane made his playoff record 70 this year although the six hits Galt managed were more than he gave up in any of his previous six complete-game appearances.

AHEAD OF HITTERS

Pitching for the corners and almost always ahead of the hitters, Cochrane started off with a three-pitch strikeout, then struck out the side in the second, third and fourth innings and whiffed the first two batters in the fifth inning for a streak of 11 straight putouts. He finished with 13 Ks.

Galt got single hits in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings and two in the sixth inning but Cochrane was in serious trouble only in the second and sixth.

BEARS DOWN

In the second, a single and one of his wto bases on balls around a strikeout put two runners on with one out. Cochrane then struck out the next two hitters, using only seven pitches.

A bigger test came in the final inning. Catcher Brian Shouldice got his third consecutive single with one out. Cochrane followed by getting his 13th strikeout but a base on balls and a single by Doug Goertzen loaded the bases and brought up pinch-hitter Terry Davey.

Davey was called in from the third-base coaching box, and that brought up a nerve-testing situation for Cochrane.

The pinch-hitter went after the first pitch and was an easy out, but it didn't count because time had been called when the replacement coach ran across the diamond and the jubilant Collingwood players had to be called back to resume play.

But Cochrane got the game-ending out on a short fly to centre-field.

Collingwood had troubles with Jim Hodges, a chunky right-hander who gave up only three hits. But the B.C. champions used all of them for their runs.

They got their first run in the first inning when a two-out error put Harold Nassey on base. A passed ball moved him up and he scored when Bill Gamble's right-field single was juggled.

A base on balls and singles by Nassey and Gamble brought the insurance run in the third inning.

There was little to choose between righthanders Pierre Rochefort and Tom Betts in the afternoon game. Betts struck out 12 and gave up three hits while Rochefort struck out nine and lost because the Prairie champions bunched their four hits in the first two innings.

A bases-loaded line single by Jeff Milne brought the Edmonton club two runs in the first inning. The third run for the winners came on a ground-out after a base on balls and singles by Stu Brookwell and Duncan Knoll had loaded the bases.

Valleyfield missed its best chance in the second inning, loading the bases after two were out on a base on balls, a hit batter and a single. John Stewart followed with a single but Betts got out of the inning when the runner on second base was cut down at the plate.

Betts had mild trouble twice after that. A two-out single and two errors on what should have been the third out brought Valleyfield within a run in the fourth inning and he issued two bases on balls in the sixth between his last three strikeouts.

Valleyfield and Galt play this afternoon at 2, eliminating the losers. Collingwood and Edmonton Haristy play at 6.

Former Winners Pass First Tests

Defending-champion Harry Givan of Seattle and three former champions advanced Tuesday to the quarter-finals of the 43rd annual Seniors North West Golf Association tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Givan eliminated Vancouver's Stewart Cooper, two-up, and will meet Don Woodard of Walla Walla, who downed Nels Perkins of Tacoma, two-and-one.

Victoria's Dr. George Bigelow beat another Victorian, Bill Sanford, five-and-four, to advance against Portland's Fran Andrews, a two-and-one winner over A. W. Johnson of Vancouver.

Two-time champion Dr. Melvin Aspray of Spokane knocked A. H. Alexander of Victoria out of the competition with a four-and-three victory. Dr. Aspray meets E. William Johnson of Seattle, who defeated Victoria's Gordon Verley, two-and-one.

Bill Blakely, a three-time champion from Portland, downed Jack Edgell of Vancouver, four-and-two, and will face Robert Palmer of Seattle, who handed fellow-Seattlite Murray Marsh a five-and-four defeat.

Play in all flights and divisions continues today starting at 1:30 p.m. with the shotgun-start format.

Swimmers Set Three Records

MONTREAL (CP) — Three more Canadian records were broken Tuesday night in the day's finals for the national swimming championshps.

George Smith of the South Side Swimming Club in Edmonton broke two with a time of 4:48.0 in the men's 400 metre individual medley, down from the previous Canadian open record of 4:48.2 and the Canadian native record of 4:51.8.

And Jeanne Warren of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club set a Canadian native record for the women's 400 individual medley with a time of 5:24.9.

The previous record held by Elaine Tanner of Vancouver was 5:25.3.

Donna-Marie Gurr, a 14-year-old from the Canadian Dolphin swimming club in Vancouver, won the women's 100-metre backstroke Tuesday with a time of 1:10.0. The Canadian native record of 1:06.7 is held by Elaine Tanner of Vancouver.

Grant Treloar of Port Alberni, B.C., was second to Smith in the heats and Sandy Shearer, also of Port Alberni, placed second in his heat but neither placed in the final.

Gunfighter Returning To Dragways

Portland's Gary Coe brings his Gunfighter "C" altered class 1957 Ford to Van Isle Dragways Sunday, fulfilling a rain-postponed July 6 scheduled appearance at the Mill Bay strip.

Coe's 289-cubic-inch machine has been timed in just more than 10 seconds for the quarter-mile distance, averaging between 130 and 145 miles per hour. Coe is currently in third place in National Hot Rod Association standings in Division VI.

Gates open at 9 a.m., time trials begin at 10:00 and eliminations start at 1:30 p.m.

City Bowlers Will Meet East Champs

Victoria fivepinners Vera Lyane and Stan Jones, current Master Bowlers Association of British Columbia singles champions, will meet MBA of Ontario's champions in the second annual Masters Canadian singles fivepin championship Sept. 1 in Vancouver.

The Ontario bowlers, Norah Oakley of Toronto and Joe Chiki of Welland, were the winners of the six-tournament, Ontario Masters tour.

The matches will be bowled at the Pacific National Exhibition.

Sox' Misfortune . . . . . . Almost Unbelievable

May's Injury May End His Career

CHICAGO (AP)—A mishap that tore off half the throwing-hand thumb of brilliant rookie Carlos May and may have ended his career has climaxes an almost unbelievable season of misfortune for Chicago White Sox.

May's injury, the most serious in a string of crippling injuries to a dozen Sox players since spring training, was caused by the misfiring of a mortar tube which the Marine reserve was cleaning at Camp Pendelton, Calif., Monday.

A club source said Tuesday the 21-year-old May, on a two-week tour of duty, may have to undergo some skin grafting and is under observation for possible infection.

A leading American League candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors, May topped the Sox in RBIs, 62, homers 18, total bases 179 and walks 58, and was batting .281 when he left for summer camp.

The ill-fated 1968 White Sox season started with first-baseman Tommie McCraw tearing knee tendons in spring training for a six-week sidelining. Shortly afterward, veteran Manager Al Lopez had to quit because of an ailing stomach and was replaced by Gutteridge.

Scarcely a week passed without a White Sox player being disabled. Catcher Don Pavletich was out five weeks with a broken hand. Infielder Wood Held fractured a shoulder blade June 21. The next day, catcher Duane Josephson went out with a blood clot in his arm and he still is sidelined.

Pitcher Don Secrist had a bone broken in his right hand by a pitched ball July 17 and was optioned to Tucson Monday. Outfielder Buddy Bradford suffered a hip injury Aug. 5 and still is benched.

Second baseman Bobby Knoop suffered a fracture of the rim of his right eye socket July 27 and will be out a month. Pitcher Gary Peters currently has a sprained ankle.

Island Athletes Selected

Vancouver Island athletes have gained 15 of the 46 berths on the B.C. team for the dual track and field meet against the Prairies on Saturday in Edmonton.

The meet is being held to give experience to junior competitors who have not had international experience.

Chosen for the men's team are Victoria Track Club members Brian Thomas (100 metres, 4 x 100 and 4 x 400 relays), Ken Armstrong (400 metres, 4 x 100), Dan Ryan (400 metres, 4 x 400), Dave Weicker (800 and 1500 metres) and Murray Keating (hammer throw).

Also on the men's team are Paul Washington of Cowichan Valley Ceevacs (1500 metres) and Ken Hirst of Nanaimo (5000 metres).

Victoria Track Club members on the ladies team include Wendy Thompson (1500 metres), Jill Pelland (200-metre hurdles) and Linday Jack (high and long jumps).

Nanaimo entries are Jean Baldwin (400 metres, 4 x 400), Debbie Chapman (100-metre hurdles) and Barbara Huck (long jump).

Stephanie Corby of Esquimalt Track Club (400, 4 x 400) and Patti Loverock of Comox (200, 4 x 100) complete the lineup.

Pretty Linda Wright holds the flag for Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., while her husband Bill Wright Jr., of Edmonton watches, during practice round for the B.C. Open golf championship at Uplands. A pro-am event Thursday precedes the three-day tournament which gets underway Friday. P.S. — the putt dropped. —(Jim Ryan)

B.C. Team Retains Golf Title As Marilyn Palmer Sizzles

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver fired a three-under-par 70 Tuesday to lead British Columbia to victory in the senior interprovincial team play of the Canadian women's golf championships.

The pretty blonde also wound up in top place in the 36-hole qualifications for the national amateur championships opening today. She put Tuesday's 70 with a 76 over the first 18 holes of medal play Monday for an even-par 146 total.

PASSES TEAMMATE

She steamed past B.C. teammate Gail Harvey Moore, first-round leader, and left her fellow Vancouverite four strokes behind at 150. Mrs. Moore, who shot a par 73 over the Moncton Golf and Country Club course Monday, fell off to a 77 Tuesday.

Miss Palmer, a 10-year golfing veteran at 22, birdied four holes and parred 12 to establish a women's record on this course. She parred the 18th hole for her 70 and was a bit disappointed she couldn't have cut off at least one more stroke.

WANTED FIRST 69

"I really wanted that 69," she said in a matter-of-fact appraisal of her blistering round. "I've been in the 70s before, but never the 60s."

In her bid for a birdie on the 18th green, the soft-spoken perfectionist stroked the ball from about 10 feet away from the pin.

"It started to come in from the right, but stopped two inches short."

PRAISED BY RUNNER-UP

Mrs. Moore said Miss Palmer's round was well-deserved.

"It's just great for her. She was three strokes back and really came on.

"I didn't play badly but the putts just didn't drop."

The British Columbia team win was its second in a row. It finished with 458 to Ontario's 459 and Quebec's 476.

MARLENE FALTERS

Marlene Stewart Streit of Fonthill, Ont., last year's Canadian women's open and close golf champion, blew to a six-over-par 79 Tuesday for a 36-hole total of 159. She still qualified for the championship flight in match-play competition for the amateur title.

Sharing fourth place with 487s were New Brunswick and Alberta. They were followed by Saskatchewan with 492, Nova Scotia 502, Manitoba 515, Prince Edward Island 553 and Newfoundland 571.

In junior play, Lisa King, a 17-year-old London, Ont. golfer playing her first national tournament, wrapped up by the closest margin the 36-hole individual junior championship.

Miss King shot a steady five-over-par 78 — four strokes better than Monday's 82 — finishing with 160, one stroke ahead of Ontario team-mate Andrea Stoddart of Oak Ridges, Ont., and Helen Mariatt of Chilliwack, B.C.

It was the London junior's improved play which also helped Ontario take the junior team title, holding off the hard-pressing British Columbia team of Miss Mariatt and Holly Botham of Pitt Meadows.

Ontario finished with 321 to B.C.'s 323 after taking a one-stroke lead in the first-round play Monday.

Saskatchewan placed third with 342, New Brunswick had 347, Alberta 351, Nova Scotia 365, Manitoba 367, Quebec 370, Prince Edward Island 373 and Newfoundland 383.

Big Guns Arriving for Open

Uplands' Course Record in Jeopardy

* * *

By GORDE HUNTER

The big guns began arriving at the Uplands' golf course Tuesday in preparation for the 1969 B.C. Open, and most of them wasted little time with the social amenities, prefering, instead, to get down to the business of working out the travelling kinks and learning the layout.

Top-rated threats like Moe Norman, Ken Fulton, Bill Wakeham and Wilf Homeniuk toured the 6215-yard, par-70 course and while no scores were posted, the word was that none of them found the going particularly difficult.

The word is also that the competitive course record of 67, set by Royal Colwood's Laurie Kerr, could easily take a drubbing before the final shots are in the cup late Sunday afternoon.

Uplands president Gord Pellow predicts there will be at least one round as low as 63, but hedges the prediction slightly with the observation that any great amount of rain could boost the scores slightly.

It is generally conceded the front nine, which measures 3363 yards, will present more than enough problems for the 202 pros and amateurs entered, but that the short (2852 yards) back side should be birdie alley, especially for many of the big hitters.

The toughest holes are expected to be the first, sixth, 12th and 18th — good tests on any golf course, while a hot shooter could have a field day with holes like the eighth, 13th, 14th, 15th and 17th. It is conceivable that many players will be able to drive par fours like the 13th, 15th and 17th, leaving themselves in position for eagle putts. The same holds true for the par five, 445 yard 14th, a dog-leg to the right and easily reached in two shots.

The condition of Uplands can be described as excellent, with both the fairways and greens in top shape, although there have already been some complaints voiced about the gravelly-type sand used in some of the traps.

Carlings, sponsors of the event, have put up $10,000 in prize money, low pro taking home $2,000. Another $730 will be up for grabs for the pros entered in Thursday's pro-am and the first player (either amateur or pro) to score a hole-in-one on the par three, 180 yard 11th, will drive away in a new Camaro sport coupe.

The Open itself gets underway at eight Friday morning, with 18 holes Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Baseball Owners Fret Over Home Troubles

SEATTLE (AP) — Major league baseball owners discussed the future of Bowie Kuhn behind closed doors at their annual summer session here Tuesday while the members of at least two delegations were preoccupied by troubles in the home camp.

Kuhn, the New York lawyer now temporary commissioner of baseball at a stipend of $100,000 a year, is expected to get a four-year contract at that sum, or more before the meeting ends tonight.

The distressing news that rookie outfielder Carlos May had been injured in a military training accident at Camp Pendleton, Calif., prompted Chicago White Sox vice-president Edwin Short to plan an early departure.

Short said he would fly south this morning to talk with Navy doctors and with May, who lost part of the thumb of his right hand when a round of ammunition fired in a mortar tube he was cleaning.

Trouble of a different sort brought a promise of prompt action from Calvin R. Griffith, president of the Minnesota Twins.

His team manager, Billy Martin, said Monday he had knocked out pitcher Dave Boswell in front of a Detroit bar last Wednesday after Boswell had knocked down outfielder Bob Allison.

"This has to be settled," said Griffith, "and if it wasn't for this Seattle meeting it would be settled now. I'm going back home Thursday. Friday I may fly to Washington and talk with them. I want to know everything that happened.

The National and American League owners met jointly Tuesday morning for informal discussions and broke into two groups for individual league sessions in the afternoon, also behind closed doors. Kuhn said both groups would talk over his situation as well as other matters.

The commissioner said division alignments of the two leagues seem satisfactory but there is some discontent over scheduling. Other matters to be discussed are details of the World Series playoffs and relations with the minor leagues.

Practice Pays Off In Skating Tests

Eight weeks of seven-hours-a-day practice paid off for 15-year-old Linda Roe recently when she passed the second of five gold dance skating tests at Victoria Racquet Club.

The Victoria Figure Skating Club member, who has been skating for more than 10 years, qualified in the Viennese Waltz examination. She previously completed the Killian dance test successfully and will attempt to pass the final three dance routines on Aug. 24 at Racquet Club to receive her gold medal.

Miss Roe is a student at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Barry Jackson extended provincial-champion Bate Constructions shutout string to 23 innings Tuesday, holding Luckies to five hits in a 3-0 Major Men's Softball League win at Central Park.

Bates have not been scored on since their 4-2 win over Vancouver Johnstons three games ago during the provincial senior "A" tournament which they won.

Consecutive singles by Doug Gregory, Bob Holness and Brian Pearce in the first inning provided Jackson with the needed margin. Bates added two more runs in the sixth inning of the rain-shortened game.

Bates take on a league All-Star team tonight at 6:45 p.m. to raise money for their trip this weekend to Calgary to meet the Alberta champion.

Cricket Test Drawn As Rain Ends Play

NOTTINGHAM (CP) — Rain saved the visiting New Zealand cricket team against England Tuesday as the second test match was drawn.

The New Zealanders, batting between showers, took their second inning total from 37 for no wicket to 66 for 1 before a fresh storm ended the game.

England had led by 157 runs on the first innings and could feel that the luck of the weather was against them.

Graham Dowling and Bruce Murray scored 61 runs for the first wicket—the best for New Zealand in the test matches this season. Murray finished with 40 not out.

England won the first test. There is one more test match to come—at the Oval in London, starting Aug. 21.

Results of other Tuesday matches:

Leicestershire 288 for 8 declared, Lancashire 214 for 5. A draw.
Derbyshire 132 and 56 for 7. Glamorgan 338. A draw.
Somerset 150 and 199 for 9 declared, Yorkshire 129 and 196 for 7. A draw.

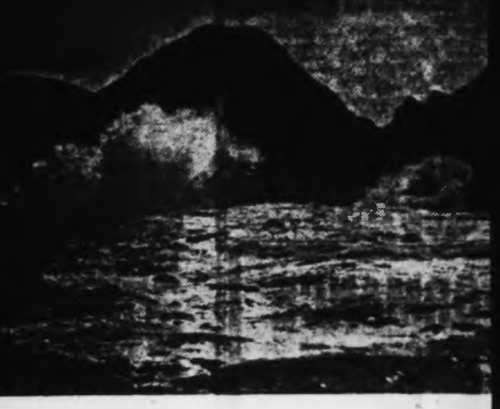
we grew up in a tough neighbourhood



It was tough 44 years ago when Island started, and things haven't changed. The backyard is twelve thousand miles of mountainous, indented coastline. Beyond that the open Pacific.

Island's tugs and reputation have grown in this environment. Trans-Pacific tows? Just routine assignments. Salvage capabilities? Island's salvage tugs are in a class by themselves. Ocean-going barges? Island has the biggest of their kind afloat ... and the largest tug in the Pacific to tow them.

In a tough neighbourhood you learn to handle any situation the right way first time ... and a lot of people have learned to bank on Island's experience.

Top South African Cricket Officials Deny Plans for Multi-Race Team

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Cricket officials in racially-segrated South Africa have denied that they plan to send a multi-racial cricket team to tour England next year.

They were commenting on an assertion by a British sports-writer that South Africa would send a racially-mixed team to avoid demonstrations from groups in Britain opposed to South Africa's apartheid policies.

* * *

"The team won't be a multi-racial one," said Dave Bursnail, secretary of the South African Cricket Association.

South African athletic teams have been barred from varous international sporting events for not including non-white athletes. South Africa was not pgrmitted to participate in the 1964 and 1968 Olympic Games.

Sports writer Ian Wooldridge, who made his assertions on a British television program, also said South Africa planned to include on its team two colored South Africans currently playing in English professional leagues.

* * *

Bursnall denied approaches had been made to the players and declined further comment.

One of the colored cricketers said to have been approached is England team player Basil d'Oliveira who was born in South Africa.

"I know of no approach to d'Oliveira or anyone else," said Jack Cheetham, vice-president of the South African Cricket Association. The touring team would not be selected in any case until March of next year, he said.

Major Projects Drag Out

Doors Eventually Open

By BILL STAVDAL

Saanich has $12,000,000 worth of buildings under construction near Royal Oak—a vocational school and a hospital for the retarded—but only crystal ball gazers are forecasting when either institution will open.

Both are well underway and it's a safe bet that they will be serving the south Island within the next few years. However, not even senior government officials are hazarding firm dates when.

There are several reasons, among them the government's system of phasing construction so that a project may be stretched over any length of time. But probably the best reason for reticence is the number of predicted opening dates that have been set and then discarded.

SHELL STANDING

Closest to completion is the regional vocational school north of the provincial jail and east of Interurban Road. Shell of a $2,285,000 workshop complex is already up.

This is phase one of the project, being built by C. J. Oliver Ltd. of Vancouver. An administration wing and classrooms are on the public works department drawing boards as phase two.

"The whole thing will likely run to $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 by the time it's finished," J. S. White, provincial director of technical and vocational training, said Tuesday.

FISCAL YEAR

First clases probably won't be held in the new school until the next fiscal year, ". . . after April 1, 1970," said Mr. White.

"There is much development work to be done: equipment to be purchased and staff to be hired," he explained.

Even so, Mr. White's forecast is more optimistic than a government release of last December, which said that the first phase was expected to be completed "in the fall of 1970."

SIX YEARS AGO

Capital Region school trustees have been proding the government for years to complete a vocational school. The first public meeting on the issue was held May 2, 1963.

The trustee's concern is that many graduates of the high school vocational program have nowhere to continue their studies. High school vocational training is not designed to teach a trade.

In the meantime, some vocational courses are offered in Victoria in four temporary quarters. This fall's offerings: basic training for skill development, four commercial courses, two drafting courses, electronics, navigation, and practical nursing.

ELECTION TIME

Glendale Hospital for the retarded had its formal beginning at a ground-breaking ceremony Sept. 7, 1966, just five days before the last provincial election. Today the basement and main floor of the hospital is going in.

Public works minister Chant, who raised first sod with an explosive charge three years ago, refused to make any prediction of a completion date during the ceremony.

"At least a year, possibly a little longer," he said then. "It's not wise to set a date."

TWO AND HALF YEARS

The current estimate of an opening ceremony date is "two to two and a half years from now," said Dr. Gordon Tucker, deputy mental health minister.

The hospital building now under construction off Markham Road is phase 5B of Glendale Hospital. It was awarded to Burns and Dutton Ltd. of Richmond for $4,914,000.

Already completed is $1,700,000 worth of work on clearing, excavation, footings, foundations, parking and roads and a boiler house-laundry facility.

The project has been altered considerably since its inception. It was first designated as a school, with accommodation for 550 children including the trainable mentally retarded and the emotionally disturbed.

There was to have been classrooms, cottages, a library and gymnasium-auditorium.

The 200,000-square-foot building now under construction will house 288 patients, young and old. All will have severe mental and physical handicaps.

"We now feel that trainable children don't belong in this setting," Dr. Tucker said Tuesday. "Increasingly, training will take place in the community."

WAITING LIST

Health minister Ralph Loffmark said last week that the opening of Glendale Hospital will eliminate B.C.'s waiting list for custodial care of this kind.

Dr. Tucker added that there are about 250 persons on B.C.'s waiting list.

The government will not operate Glendale. It will be run by a society or board, the deputy minister said.

The reason is the federal government's refusal to make grants to provincial mental hospitals.

P-TA Models Policy On Teachers' Plan

The B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation announced an election-time education policy on Tuesday which is modelled closely on that of the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Like the BCTF, the Parent-Teacher Federation is opposed to local referendums for any school district operating funds.

The parent-teacher group favors smaller class sizes, kindergarten for all pre-schoolers, more gymnasiums and schools designed for community use, government money for education research and classes for children with special learning problems.

All these points were touched on in the teachers' policy statement of Aug. 5.

In addition, the Parent-Teacher Federation calls for sex education and family life studies in elementary and high schools.

This has been federation policy for several years.

The statement issued Tuesday endorsed no political parties.

It said that citizens " . . . have an opportunity to express their desire for improved educational facilities and educational finances by casting their ballots for those candidates who endorse the following (points)."

Shorncliffe, Synod

Saanich to Alter Street Names

Saanich public works committee Tuesday night recommended changing the name of port of Shorncliffe Road to Synod Road.

One street is the continuation of the other. The southern section, now called Synod, would be changed to Synod South. The northern portion adjoining Wende, now called Shorncliffe, would be changed to Synod North. Wende Road will retain its name. A short section of Shorncliffe running east and west also will retain its name.

Ald. Alan Newberry said he thought residents should be consulted before the change was made. Mayor Hugh Curtis told the committee he became aware of the need to change the name when he moved to Shorncliffe and suggested that the residents be canvassed.

SHOULD KNOW

Ald. Leslie Passmore said he thought the residents in the 3800 and 3900 blocks of Shorncliffe should know that they are the ones affected.

The public works committee also approved minor extensions to sewer systems to serve four small areas of the municipality. They will be paid for out of the sewer enterprise fund.

They are: Vernon, west of Douglas, $1,600; Persimmon Drive, $31,000; James Heights, $10,500 and Greenlands Road, $10,200.

The committee also recommended to council a change in the order of reconstruction of Interurban Road.

Included in the 1969 road program is reconstruction of Interurban from North Road to Courtland at a cost of $60,000.

ROAD ACROSS

Municipal engineer Neville Life said the design of this part of the road depends on whether there will be a development of a system of lakes and streams in the western section of Saanich in connection with the Colquitz Open Space Plan.

This could involve a dam with a road across it, Mr. Life said, and the decision won't be made until it is too late to start construction this year.

"It's a reversal in staging we're suggesting," he said.

The committee recommended reconstructing Interurban between Courtland and the new vocational school this year and including the other section in next year's program.

No Prize Awaits In Skies

Air Canada says it is getting a rash of telephone calls from Victoria to its reservation office in Vancouver in which the callers are claiming a $500 prize in an airline contest.

"There's no such prize and no such contest," said an Air Canada official.

It appears that someone in Victoria is telling people to dial the Air Canada reservation number—a toll free call to Vancouver—to claim the award.

"We are getting several calls a day," said the Air Canada man, "but we have no idea who is spreading the story."

New Heating

The education department has approved heating plant conversions at Royal Oak elementary and junior high schools totalling $77,857, it was announced this week.

Elected

Erling Olson of 3038 Washington, was elected to the Grand Council of the Sovereign Grand Priory of Canada at the 86th annual assembly of the governing body of Canada's 77 Masonic communities in London, Ont. Harry Killam, of New Westminster, was elected Grand Master.

Summer Crafts On Show

A showing of arts and crafts created by Saanich children in the summer recreation program in 21 of the municipality's parks will be displayed at an open house in the G. R. Pearkes Arena from noon until 5 p.m. today.

The open house was to have been held at Beaver Lake but, because of unsettled weather, the location has been changed.

Highlight of the event will be a fancy dress parade at 3 p.m. with prizes for the best costumes.

The open house marks the last week of the summer recreation program which ends Friday.

Apathy of Voters Spurs Action By Young People

Startled by alleged voter apathy among their elders, some of Victoria's young people will be launching a get-out-and-vote campaign at 3 p.m. Friday in Centennial Square.

"Do you know that some people don't even know that there's an election on?" 18-year-old Brian Green of the Victoria Youth Communications Centre said Tuesday.

The Centre keeps young people informed of city youth events.

"I'm not old enough to vote in this election, but I was doing some canvassing, and I found people who had somehow escaped the newspapers, radio and television, and didn't know what I was talking about.

WHAT CANDIDATES?

"People who knew there was to be an election often didn't know who the candidates were or which party they represented."

He said about six young people, some old enough to vote and others under voting age, will talk to people in the square and try to get some election enthusiasm going.

"We've got the blessing of the political parties, and hope to get approval from city hall for the project," said 21-year-old Blaine Duncan, a Summer of Service volunteer from Ontario.

LOW TURNOUT

He said figures show a low voting turnout among Vic West and Quadra Street residents.

"After we've been to the square we shall try to get out into these districts and get them to understand the importance of every single vote.

He said they will be trying to talk to the young voters in particular.

LOW-INCOME

"The older people get, the more likely they seem to to vote," he said. "We shall concentrate on the young people.

"It seems that low-income people also have too many problems to bother voting and we shall try to tell them that their opinion is necessary."

Burning Ban Lifted But Not in Saanich

Saanich remains the lone holdout in the Greater Victoria area on domestic burning.

Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons lifted the ban in Victoria as of dawn today.

Domestic burning in incinerators is permitted in Esquimalt, Langford, Colwood, Sidney, North Saanich, Oak Bay, View Royal and Metchosin.

Airborne Outfall Viruses Could Vanish—Profitably

By DIANE JANOWSKI

The scientist who has found that virus-laden clouds of fecal particles gather over Greater Victoria's offshore sewage outfalls and are then blown over a wide area said Tuesday that the modern total treatment plants required could be operated at a profit.

"There are by-products that can be produced from a well-designed plant so that it can run at a profit," said Dr. Sidney Webb, a microbiologist with the University of Saskatchewan.

"They are expensive to set up, but once they are going, they will be self-supporting and not a drain on the community."

* * *

He said such products as ceramics, fancy bricks and pure fertilizers are produced by English treatment plants which operate at a profit.

"You can drink the water that comes out of some of them."

Dr. Webb said the only safe method of treating sewage is in a modern, closed-environment plant.

In his Victoria study last year, the expert on aerial microbiology found the possibly disease-causing particles had drifted as far as six miles from the outfall sites.

The air-borne viruses, which health officials have said are probably responsible for 30 to 35 per cent of infectious hepatitis cases, can infect people who either breathe them or eat the fruit and vegetables upon which they settle.

* * *

Diseases are so easily spread by the air that both Russia and the United States have begun immunizing people by adding the germs to the air in the buildings as the people work. Dr. Webb said this method has proved much more effective than the traditional needle-type exposure to the disease.

"The chances of being infected in this method are probably remote, however, because the environment here is so large," he said.

"The danger comes from consuming fall-out material. There is no guarantee that washing fruit and vegetables removes viruses."

* * *

He said that viruses, unlike bacteria, can pass directly into the fruit's core if left on it for as little as a day.

Dr. Webb called for the establishment of air quality standards governing its microbiological condition. He said the public health officials condemn food or water found with levels of enteric organisms similar to those found in the air near the outfalls.

"I want the same standards for the air. There is a potential danger here."

* * *

The microbiologist said all pollution matters, including the construction of sewage treatment plants should be the responsibility of the federal government.

"One can't treat a problem like this as a provincial matter. There should be national standards because a provincial government might be more inclined to accept pollution to gain industry while the federal government could take a broader look."

* * *

Speaking of longer outfalls, he said: "Distance doesn't make any difference" and pointed out that even a nine-inch wave is enough to shoot an aerosol of virus-bearing particles 1,000 feet into the air where they can be picked up by winds.

"The only real solution is preventative," he said. "Since it would take two to three years to study the problem thoroughly, the obvious solution is to say, 'Let's not have a problem at all by building the right type of plant now'."

* * *

Dr. Webb suggested that a centrifugal system wherein the sewage would be separated according to its density and then filtered might be developed.

He is in Victoria to speak on aspects of sewage disposal Thursday night at 8 p.m. in room 144, MacLaurin Building, at the university.

Hoof-Mouth Disease Strikes U.K. Again

MONTGOMERY, Wales (UPI)—A suspected case of hoof and mouth disease was reported Tuesday on a farm in the Wales-England border region which was the centre of 1967's disastrous outbreak.

★ ★ ★

Agriculture ministry officials said they were checking the case, which occurred in a heifer on a farm at Llwynmbin, near Montgomery. They clamped temporary movement restrictions on farm animals in a five-mile area around the farm.

★ ★ ★

Montgomery is just across the Welsh border from the county of Shropshire where the 1967 outbreak of hoof and mouth disease started.

★ ★ ★

Veterinary officers at a ministry research centre in Irbright, south of London, were making tests on specimens taken from the Welsh heifer. The results were expected to be known today.

The new suspect case was the first since June 4, 1968, when the last animal affected by the 1967-68 epidemic was detected.

★ ★ ★

Britain does not inoculate animals against the disease, which is not endemic. The ministry has a policy of mass slaughtering of animals on affected farms.

★ ★ ★

In the 1967-68 epidemic—blamed on meat imported from Argentina—400,000 animals were slaughtered in 2,000 outbreaks of the disease. The government paid out $62,400,000 compensation to farmers.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our many friends and relatives for the kindness and sympathy extended to us during our recent bereavement. Also for the beautiful floral offerings and cards. A special thanks to Rev. Pelletier and to the Pallbearers.
—Mrs. Linda Marino and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Morino.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Dorothy Robbins and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbours for their sympathy and floral offerings in their recent bereavement.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BRENNAN — In loving memory of my dear husband, John, who passed away August 13th, 1965.
Ever remembered by his wife Laura and family.

HARRIS — In loving memory of our beloved husband, father, and grandfather, Ray, who passed away Aug. 13, 1968.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife Ethel, sons Jim and E. Ray, daughter Anne, daughter-in-law Flo, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

SMYTHE — In loving memory of my brother, Jack, who passed away Aug. 13, 1968.
"Always remembered."
—Jessie.

CITY SALES REPRESENTATIVE

The young man we want should be happily married with a high school or better education who enjoys living in Victoria and would like the opportunity for a successful career in this city. Please do not bother to answer this advertisement unless you enjoy meeting people, are prepared to work hard and consistently a minimum of 8 hours a day, for 5 days each week, and have the natural ability to use you initiative in contacting prospective clients.

We will completely train the right man and will pay a substantial salary plus monthly and of-year bonus incentive which will result in an income on the 1st year of between $7,000 and $10,000. In addition we will provide life insurance and a non-contributary pension plan.

We will be glad to discuss this matter in complete confidence with anyone who meets the above qualifications and would like further information about this business opportunity. Apply in writing to Victoria Press Box 686. All members of our staff are aware of this advertisement.

Duncan Visit

Berger Promises B.C. Ombudsman

DUNCAN — An ombudsman to help prevent bureacratic abuse of civil rights will be established at the next legislative session if B.C. choses an NDP government Aug 27, Tom Berger said at a Ducan press conference Tuesday.

The NDP leader, seated beside his predecessor Robert Strachan at a press conference, said a "highly qualified" person would be found to fill the post and investigate complaints against government bureaucratic abuse of power.

Mr. Berger also annouced that the former leader would make the necessary motion at the 1970 legislative session to have debates recorded and published in Hansard form, should an NDP government be in power then.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Berger recalled that Mr. Strachan as opposition leader had repeatedly tried to get House approveal for a Hansard, but without success.

Mr. Berger called Mr. Strachan a "bulwark" of the NDP and the "ablest parliamentarian" in the B.C. Legislature. Cowichan-Malahat, he said, is "one riding we are quite confident of winning."

Mr. Berger repeatedly refused to predict the outcome of the election, but said a "restructuring" of the cabinet would be necessary in an NDP administration. Education, health and lands, forest and water resources departments would be reorganized, he said, and added "my own inclination would be not carry more than one portfolio.

"I would like to remain free of any departmental responsibilities . . . so I could go around and bug other ministers," he said.

★ ★ ★

He claimed that Premier Bennett's charge, labelling the NDP as Marxist, had misfired and had created a blacklash.

"I am not a Marxist, I am a socialist," said Mr. Berger.

Mr. Berger said: "People are tired of Mr. Bennett's wild attacks." Mr. Berger said that as a socialist he believed that the public's interests came before private groups.

Referring to the apple symbol in large advertisements by the B.C. Teachers' Federation Mr. Berger stated some of the NDP candidates may use the symbol in their campaign material.

★ ★ ★

"The teachers have every right to make education an issue in this election."

He said his party was supporting the eight points set forth by the teachers.

Mr. Berger stated that an NDP government would attempt to bring about a new financial formula for education after consulting with teachers, parents and school boards.

When a reporter asked if Mr. Berger had a policy about government help for local recreational facilities, Mr. Strachan appeared to come to the leader's rescue by interjecting: "I would not support Tom Berger as leader of the party if he went around promising ice rinks and parks . . ."

To persisting questions, Mr. Strachan suggested that Mr. Bennett or Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan be consulted.

★ ★ ★

Moving on to a coffee party at the Tzouhalem Hotel, Mr. Strachan introduced Mr. Berger as "the next premier" of B.C. Mr. Berger told about 50 guests that "I don't think Mr. Strachan needs any help to get re-elected, but I do and that's why I'm here."

During his visit to Duncan, Mr. Berger accompanied Mr. Strachan in a visit to Mayor Jim Quaife when a number of local problems were discussed.

McDiarmid Raps Labor Coercion

PORT ALBERNI — Social Credit has turned its guns on labor involvement with the New Democratic Party in Alberni riding, charging coercion and strong-arm tactics in remote logging camp settlements.

Dr. Howard McDiarmid, Socred candidate, said Monday: "The NDP is running scared and is resorting to pressure tactics."

The Tofino physician said he had been campaigning in logging camp areas in the north part of the riding.

★ ★ ★

"I talked to a union man there who had been in five different unions in 30 years and he said this was the first time a union official tried to tell him how to vote."

Dr. McDiarmid said the IWA had sent representatives to the small isolated camps when the election was called. He said they took voter registration cards to help complete the enumeration which was admittedly scant in those areas.

"But the IWA went in and tried to limit the cards to those people they felt would vote NDP. This upset a lot of people. Several people in management there said they had never seen the cards."

★ ★ ★

Dr. McDiarmid also claimed that "at Fair Harbor, a union official said all members of the IWA there were obliged to contribute to the campaign fund."

He said he did not have the name of the man.

"These strong arm tactics are winning them more enemies than votes."

He said he had a "good reception" at the outlying camps and he visited every poll in the north part of the riding. He spent Sunday at Bamfield where he knocked on 75 per cent of the doors.

"We took Bamfield last time and we'll do it again."

Dr. McDiarmid was to campaign at Tahsis Tuesday and at Gold River Wednesday.

'It's Undemocratic'

Apple Ad Brings Protest From Nanaimo Teacher

NANAIMO — Mrs. Barbara O'Shaughnessy, a Nanaimo district teacher objects to an advertisment by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

The advertisement tell the public that candidates who refuse to put an apple insignia on their political advertising are either opposed to or apathetic toward educational improvements.

"I an very decidely against a campaign that uses coercion upon political candidates," she said.

"By telling boters that the candidates who don't use the apple are either apathetic or antagonistic towar the BCTF proposals is unfair. By this, the BCTF is denying the cemocratic rights of people — the candidates — to refuse. To deny a politician his democratic rights by use of coercion is itself undemocratic.

"After all, a candidate may be highly in favor of educational improvement policies without necessarily endorsing the specific BCTF campaign.

"The red apple is very restrictive. The canddiate is limited by giving his word to endorse the red apple or is classified as being against all educational improvements.

"However, BCTF should, as a body, be involved in informing the public of the problems of and successes in education.

"As a teacher and a member of BCTF I am for improvements in education. But as a teacher and a citizen I must publicly object to this coercive campaign against all B.C. politicians," said Mrs. O'Shaughnessy.

Liberals Choose Standard-Bearer

DUNCAN — Twenty-six-year-old Jim Bigsby, a Vancouver teacher, was nominated by acclamation as Liberal candidate for Cowichan-Malahat during a Duncan Liberal meeting Tuesday night.

He was proposed by Joe Haddock.

Mr. Bigsby is personal assistant to B.C. Liberal leader Pat McGeer and his main job is in policy work. He is also attending Simon Fraser University, studying for a teacher's certificate.

Mr. Bigsby said he may continue for his master's. He is a graduate of UVic where he obtained a BA in economics. After his graduation, he became assistant personnel officer with B.C. Forest Service in Victoria.

He and his wife planned to go to Ghana where he was going to teach but her pregnancy prevented that.

He went instead to Ontario to teach a class of emotionally disturbed and retarded children. It was there that he decided to continue in teaching.

LATE ARRIVAL

Mr. Bigsby was late for the Duncan meeting. He was to have travelled by CPR ferry to Nanaimo but oil pickets prevented the sailing so he went to B.C. Ferries' dock where vessels were delayed because they were being loaded with extra oil in the face of a picket threat.

He said it was ironic as he had planned to speak about industrial relations in B.C. He feels negotiations should be handled by an independent mediation body rather than management, which usually represented Socred views and labor which usually represented NDP views.

Sechelt Queen Coming Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Ferries planned to return the Sechelt Queen to runs between Tsawwassen and the Gulf Islands Tuesday or today. The ferry was holed when it hit a rock last week. Damage was minor and the vessel's runs were taken over by the Queen of Sidney.

Injunction Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The CPR plans to seek a court injunction to halt picketing by oil workers of its ferries to Vancouver Island.

On Tuesday, waterborne pickets prevented the sailing of the Princess of Vancouver to Nanaimo. The B.C. government ferry service was unaffected.

Tahsis Scout To Guyana

TAHSIS — Thirteen-year-old Paul Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Taylor of Tahsis will be representing British Columbia at an International Boy Scout jamboree Aug. 13 to Aug. 28 in Guyana.

Paul was given a courtesy flight from Tahsis to Vancouver by B.C. Airlines. The trip from Vancouver will be paid for by him and his family.

Two Main Theories In Tate Murders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police said Tuesday they were exploring two questions: Was the killer - or - killers - of actress Sharon Tate and four others known to her circle of friends? Or was the slayer a stranger never before seen at the $200,000 home she and her husband, director Roman Polanski, rented in suburban Bel Air.

DRUGS REPORT

Police said they were pursuing both lines of investigation for want of solid clues in the mass murder of Miss Tate, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, hair stylist Jay Sebring, screenwriter Voityck Frokowski and 18-year-old Steven Parent, a student.

The Los Angeles Times said narcotics were found in a sports car owned by Sebring which had been parked outside the estate, but police declined comment on the report.

Tests to determine if the victims had been using narcotics were being conducted by the county coroner's office but were not expected to be completed for several days.

Lieut. Robert Helder, in charge of the Tate case team, said there was no evidence of a drinking party at the home last Friday night, but the Times said it was known that there had been a party there that night. The deaths were believed to have occurred early Saturday.

JUST ONE

"We started with just one possible witness, the Garretson boy," said Inspector Harold Yarnell referring to 19-year-old caretaker William Garretson who was released for lack of evidence Monday.

Garretson, in his caretaker's quarters, was the only other person alive on the estate when police arrived after a maid discovered the bodies.

Another detective said Garretson told interrogators of a youth he once chased off the Polanski's property after the youth stole four bottles of champagne.

The detective said investigators were also interested in meeting a former soldier who Garretson said once visited the estate. The soldier supposedly had received a discharge from the service on psychiatric grounds.

ONE SHOT

Four of the five victims died of stab wounds, the coroner has said. Only Parent, a friend of Garretson, was shot. His bullet-riddled body was found in his car on the Polanski's driveway. Garretson said Parent had visited him at his quarters.

Further complicating police investigations were the murders Sunday night of a grocery store owner and his wife in their Los Feliz Hills home, about five miles from Miss Tate's palatial estates.

Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary, were repeatedly stabbed—as were four of the victims at Miss Tate's house. And, a makeshift hood was found over LaBianca's head, similar to the hood found over Sebring.

Lennon

Shot After Gun Struggle

Lennon Girls' Dad Slain

VENICE, Calif. (UPI)—William Lennon, 53, father of the singing Lennon sisters, was shot to death Tuesday in an execution style slaying near the golf range where he worked as an instructor.

The suspect escaped in a car.

Lennon's brother Jimmy said, "The killer could be one of those kooks who insist, after seeing the girls on television, that one of them is in love with him. It could be one of those crank callers. There are so many kooks."

Police checked with the Secret Service about a man who allegedly wrote a letter to former president Johnson making threats because he could not get permission to marry one of Lennon's daughters. Officers described the man, whom they would not identify, as a mental patient from Colorado.

★ ★ ★

The suspect was waiting in the parking lot of the Marina Del Rey golf range and jumped out from behind another car as Lennon approached shortly after noon, said witness Watson Counsil.

The man pulled a rifle from a gunny sack and he and Lennon, the father of 11 children, struggled over it.

Other witnesses said Lennon appeared to know the gunman, who swore at Lennon. Lennon swore back.

★ ★ ★

Then Lennon shouted, "No, no don't do it. Help, help!"

"Bill broke away and started toward the entrance to the parking lot," Counsil said. "The man fired, hit him once, Bill staggered and ran toward a corner fence. The man fired again and hit him in the back. Bill crawled around the fence, the man ran right up to him, put the gun to the side of his head by his ear and fired again."

Counsil said the man ran across the street to another parking lot, threw the rifle into the trunk of a car, jumped in and drove off. Counsil said he attempted to follow the man in another car but lost him.

Lennon's teenage son Daniel, who works as a golf ball boy at the range, heard the shots and ran outside where he was told his father had been shot.

Lennon was president of the Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce. He also managed the careers of his famous singing daughters, Diane, Peggy, Kathy and Janet, who were star attractions for years on the Lawrence Welk television show and will have their own TV series next fall.

As a youth, Lennon toured as a vocalist on the Keith-Orpheum circuit for four years and he was responsible for organizing his daughters as a quartet.

Wife Found Bound in Hut

Kidnapper Family Friend

PRETORIA (Reuters) — A wealthy university professor said Tuesday a man alleged to have kidnapped his wife Monday for 75,000 rand (about $106,000) ransom was "a personal friend and business acquaintance."

★ ★ ★

Prof. Koos van der Walt, head of the sociology faculty at the University of South Africa, was speaking to reporters after his wife was found bound and gagged and in a state of shock in a deserted hut some four miles outside the city.

★ ★ ★

Van der Walt said he and police were led to the hut by the man, arrested after a shooting incident near government offices in Pretoria. The man was not named.

Van der Walt said: "The terrible part of it is that the alleged abductor of my wife turns out to be more than just an acquaintance but a personal friend and a business associate.

"If he were in need of money I would have lent him as much as he needed. If only he had asked. He knows I am a man of means. I cannot understand why he resorted to this."

★ ★ ★

The professor said his wife was suffering from severe shock. "She is a very sick woman and I do not know how this ordeal will affect her."

Youths Released Following Blast

MONTREAL (CP)—Police have released two of three youths taken into custody Tuesday following a bomb explosion that shook the federal revenue building in central Montreal during the night.

The third youth was detained for further questioning and a spokesman said he would probably be held at least until Wednesday.

The youths were arrested seconds after the explosion when an officer on patrol, Sgt. Jacques Auger, spotted them running from the scene.

A search of their homes disclosed nothing, police said.

The explosion, described by police as "the most powerful" they have encountered in the last year, shattered glass doors and windows in the 14-storey building at Bleury Street and Dorchester Boulevard. It also bored a hole, two feet deep and more than one foot wide, where it was planted at the entrance.

Three watchmen in the building escaped injury, although one barely made it to safety after spotting the package seconds before it exploded.

Killer's Code Broken

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — In a puzzle worthy of a top-drawer whodunit, police are hunting the inventor of an intricate code who boasted of three lovers' lane killings.

"I like killing people . . ." began a coded message deciphered after 20 hours of work by Donald Harden, 41, a Salinas high school teacher, and his wife.

Three anonymous coded messages have been mailed recently to the Vallejo Times-Herald, the San Francisco Chronicle and the San Francisco Examiner.

★ ★ ★

The coded message was published in each newspaper. Detectives said they were convinced the decoding was accurate.

Included with the codes segments were hand-printed letters claiming the writer killed Betty Lou Jensen and David Faraday, both 16, in a lovers lane shooting last Dec. 20. He said he also shot Darlene Ferrin, 22, to death July 4 in another lovers' lane killing.

Police confirmed both incidents.

Exposed Drug Agents Fleeing Los Angeles

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuters) — Scores of California narcotics agents are hurriedly moving out of their homes following publication of their names and addresses in a Los Angeles underground newspaper.

Prowlers, threatening telephone calls and abusive remarks made to their wives and children have forced agents to abandon their homes only four days after the list was printed.

All 21 agents in the San Francisco area have moved and some 60 listed officers in Los Angeles, San Diego and Santa Ana whose addresses were disclosed are thought to be taking the same course.

The anti-establishment Los Angeles Free Press newspaper, a weekly, listed the names of 80 agents on the grounds that "there should be no secret police." It is not known how the paper acquired the list.

A $15,000,000 damage suit has been filed against The Free Press by one senior agent, narcotics bureau officials said.

State Attorney General Thomas Lynch later brought a $10,000,000 suit against the newspaper in his official capacity. Lynch also obtained a court order preventing The Free Press from publishing confidential information from the state department of justice.

THE HEMLINE:

Where Is It Going . . .

Down, Up Or In Between?

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: The guy I love is on pot. It's making a vegetable out of him and a nervous wreck out of me.

When we first met, Steve was a top student. He had a magnetic personality and a thousand friends. About eight months ago he became sloppy in his appearance and seemed to lose his sense of humor. He turned into an argumentative bully and got into trouble with everyone. I knew something was wrong when he started to skip class and forget where we were supposed to meet. One night he fell asleep during a play which I found fascinating. The following day he confessed he had been on grass for nearly a year.

Steven dropped out of school in April. His motivation is gone. He is confused and disoriented. I cannot reach him. I'm not asking for advice, Ann. I know what I must do. I can't save him so I must save myself. The purpose of this letter is to support your testimony that marijuana is bad news. — Witness To a Bad Scene.

Heaven Help Them All

Dear Witness: Thanks for the testimony. I'm glad you didn't go down with him. I've received many letters from girls who started blowing grass because their boyfriends did, and Heaven help them all.

□

Dear Ann Landers: Much has been written about the young girl who has an out-of-wedlock child because of a deep-rooted, perhaps subconscious wish to hurt her parents. What about the out-of-wedlock father? What do the behavioral scientists say about him?

Our son informed us that he and Natalie wanted to get married. Natalie is a lovely girl, from a fine family, and we were delighted. They had gone together for three years. After all the wedding plans were set and the invitations mailed, our son told us, without batting an eyelash, that Natalie was three months pregnant.

The bride's parents were stunned and so were we. It's too late to cancel the wedding. The kids must have known for several weeks but they didn't bother to tell us. Everyone in town is counting. We are humiliated. Why did our son do this? — The Bystanders.

Just Learned Himself

Dear By: Do what? If you mean why didn't he tell you about Natalie's condition sooner, probably because he just found out about it himself.

And what do the behavioral experts say about out-of-wedlock fathers? They say young, unmarried men do not link sex with pregnancy. It's the "now" thing that interests them, not what might happen later. The news of a pregnancy is often a huge surprise to the prospective papa — as if he didn't know what caused it.

□

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday I wrote to you about a very personal matter. Since I mailed the letter I've been wondering what to say to my husband if he gets to the mailbox before I do and sees a letter from Ann Landers. Your name does appear on the outside of the envelope doesn't it? Please advise — Comes The Dawn.

Dear Dawn: No. When I send advice, the letter is mailed in the envelope provided by the reader.

Hedging Designers Try Great Coverup

Kneecap Will Win—Eventually

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK—If there's one subject that sends women into a complete tizzy, it's hemlines. Waves of confusion stem from the fact that the kings of fashion are no longer authoritative enough to zero in on one hemline and announce: This is it.

Fashion's old dictatorship and its hierarchy system appear to be crumbling.

Indicative of this is the fact that three distinctly different hemlines—minis, midis and maxis—and all currently super-chic.

★ ★ ★

Noncommittal designers are taking the attitude that women should fiddle with the confusing trio of hemlines, that elegantes are far too independent to be told which hemline is "in," that variety is the spice of life.

Call these excuses the Great Coverup.

Designers are reluctant to admit the truth, but there's no designer in the lot who is influential enough to push a single hemline, long or short, into the limelight, thus outmoding all others.

This in fact, is fashion's current revolution.

★ ★ ★

For once women are being offered a wide range of hemline choices. Skirts can skim the thigh, graze the ankles or stop at any point in between. In a sense, women are masters of their own fashion fates. When has that ever happened?

In 1946 Christian Dior of Paris lowered the boom and created the new look with hemlines that dipped down to mid-leg. Instantly all other hemlines were obsolete. Women cleaned out their closets and started from scratch.

★ ★ ★

Today the idea of complete revolution every six months strikes the modern woman as being silly and impractical. Obsolescence twice yearly is a thing of the past, a myth that has exploded in the face of the designers who created it.

The electrifying clue came when designers first introduced the miniskirt. Not every woman everywhere jumped into minis.

And for the past two seasons many major fashion houses in New York, Paris and Rome attempted to put women in pantsuits. Major instigator was—and is—Yves Saint Laurent, king of paris couture, who went out on a shaky limb and showed a collection based almost entirely on the pantsuit theme.

But again there has been no mass acceptance of pantsuits.

Women have decided to do their own thing and have led a great revolt against the ups and downs of hemlines. From the mish-mash of banter between women and their favorite designers emerge two hemline facts:

● Maxis are taking their place in the winter-1970 roundup. Newest, most chic hemline is the extra-long one. But it's the alternate to the short, not a substitute.

● Minis are inching down, slowly but surely. Short skirts no longer merely cover the derriere. They stop a few inches above the knee.

Women fully expect that hemlines will level off to a "norm" and come to a dead stop somewhere below the kneecap. Many base their opinion on the fact that there appears to be a tug of war between the mini and maxi—and somewhere between these two extremes is the old knee-hiding hemline.

But this won't happen right away.

★ ★ ★

The majority of women still love short skirts because it affords them great freedom of movement as well as a chance to show off to male leg-watchers who moan at the mere mention of a mini demise.

As for maxis, they're already showing signs of catching on. Big-city retailers, both boutiques and department stores, report selling out maxi ranicoats. The look is clicking.

When the fall-winter 1970 season gallops on, some of the hemline confusion will dissolve.

★ ★ ★

In the final analysis, what does it matter if designers aren't dictatorial any more? Who cares if hemlines are this or that? Fashion is meant to be fun and good for the female psyche. Pretty soon women will march in a varied collection of hemlines and quit analyzing fashions lack of authority.

Mini, Midi or Maxi

Beware Compromise —It Lacks Courage

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

PARIS — Whenever two or three women have their heads together in Paris these days, it's a safe bet that they are dicussing the length of skirts.

"What are you going to do?" they ask each other, but they are more pleased than annoyed. The big question is not whether they will wear some of the longer skirts, but whether they will try them midcalf or almost down to the ankles.

Much Simpler

In the old days of the big Dior drop, life was much simpler. There was just one way to look and one length for skirts.

Nowadays no one single designer is powerful enough to issue an edict like that. Almost all the length changes have been tentative and offered with plenty of alternatives. It's perfectly possible for a stubborn woman to go on living her life in above-knee skirts, but it's doubtful if she will really want to when she sees the new clothes.

Delicious Choice

The way most women I've talked to see fall fashion is in a variety of lengths. There are times when nothing but a short skirt feels right, and others when it will feel marvellous to cover up again.

Most of the daytime dresses will stay short. Not that Paris designers didn't bring out plenty of long suits and tweedy dresses, but most of them managed to look pretty dreary. I'm sure some of the raving beauties and chic fashion models will wear them, but they certainly won't give a lift to the office or the poor working girl.

The two new basics every woman ought to invest in to look "with it" this fall are a long topcoat and a longer cocktail dress. That's what the ladies shopping the Paris collections are ordering from their favorite designers, but both types are all over America, too.

The pavement-length topcoat was a favorite with the high-style girls last winter.

Long Coats In

This fall the long topcoat will no longer look even slightly startling. It will be everybody's fashion. American fashion collections were full of coats that reached the ankles or grazed the pavement, and reproductions of some of the long Paris coats will be coming along, too. Any woman who passes up this new fashion is passing up a wonderful bet for cold weather comfort as well as style.

The new, longer cocktail dress is already a favorite here, with both the trend-setters and the conservatives. Probably the most-ordered fashions in Paris have been the informal party dresses at Givenchy that stop anywhere from midcalf to just above the ankles. The exact length is hardly ever set by inches as it used to be, but depends on the length of legs or the individual mood.

"I can hardly wait to wear it to the theatre this winter," said the lady who had just ordered Givenchy's black organdie, with the little ruffle about three inches above her ankles. "I'm so sick of staring at my knees and draping my coat or even a program over them."

Don't Count

Besides the black organdie, another Ford in the Givenchy collection is the silver lame. The low flare is midcalf length but, as I say, exact inches don't matter as long as the look is definitely longer.

A few Paris houses tried dropping skirts to just below the knees. It didn't come off. Wear your skirts as short as you like, or down to midcalf and longer. In between is a dreary compromise that looks like no courage or last year's clothes.

Heartbroken

It ought to be an exciting winter. I'll be heartbroken if publisher Bennett Cerf doesn't denounce the drop in skirts, if husbands don't forbid their wives to drag around the streets in pavement-length coats, if there aren't a few indignation meetings and some customers who swear they wouldn't be caught dead without their thighs in full view.

Fashion has been all too quiet lately, and a little excitement will give it more heart.

Many Ideas Outmoded On How to Keep Cool

By MARY SUE MILLER

What's your system for keeping cool? It's surprising how many of us cling to outmoded ideas on the subject. As a result we suffer a good deal of avoidable discomfort and disarray.

Accoring to researchers, these are the cool facts:

● You feel cooler — and actually are — after a warm bath or shower than a cold one. Warm water dilates the blood vessels, an action which induces internal heat to escape through the skin. Try it!

● However torrid the weather, you need some exercise to stimulate your circulation. A sluggish body is wide open to heat fatigue.

● You also need all the cool water you can drink. But do not bypass hot beverages or meals. Above all, keep up your protein intake.

● Remember that lightweight, absorbent clothing acts like a thermostat to regulate the body's cooling mechanism. Thus a brimmed hat and a sheer, long-sleeved dress will keep you cooler than scanty attire. A mere film of makeup and a sleek hairdo is cool and looks it.

● As nerves and tension can get you real het up, plan your day to avoid unnecessary pressures. List the duties you must perform, but no more than you know you can accomplish. If the going gets tough, make yourself take a 10-minute break. Hurry and flurry knock you out in zero weather. Not to mention 110 in the shade.

Beauty Advice

". . . I have never yet seen a finer method of improving the complexion. Wrinkles are smoothed, dryness is checked, blemishes vanish and the skin takes on a healthy, youthful look . . ." (Extract from a report by Margaret Merril suggesting the use of the moist tropical oil of Olay as a powder base.) Most druggists are now able to obtain supplies of this oil which gives glorious loveliness to the skin.

BE WISE ... IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

I want to tell you about a wonderful tour I took when in Ireland recently. It seems that everything has caught up with me since returning. So I haven't had a chance to talk about all the interesting things that happened. And the Irish people.

●

Not that there is a chance of my forgetting. You just don't forget Ireland or the people. The beauty of the scenery, the wonderful, almost unbelievable colors of the countryside and sea and lakes or the singing, the humor or the elusive charm of the Irish.

Right here I should tell you that these conducted tours are a wonderful way to see the country. Almost a must if you are on your own on a first visit as I was.

You learn so much about the country this way as the courier, if he is anything like Michael O'Toole, (ours) can rattle off the history of every place you pass and of every town or city that you happen to see.

The driver of our coach was Patrick O'Dea. I'm not kidding — there we were being escorted around Ireland by Pat and Mike.

Something Gaelic

This was a CIE tour — don't ask me to explain what it stands for as I think it is something Gaelic. It was really a good tour — took us down south from Dublin and up north along the west coast and back down through the centre of the country.

The troubled northeast corner, Belfast and Londonderry, we skipped altogether.

The southern Irish seem to lay all the blame for the recent troubles at Ian Paisley's door. He and his new religion, named the Free Presbyterian.

As it was early in the season there were not too many of us on our particular coach. Noticed though, that most of the buses we met were filled.

However, our little group was pleased that we were few and so could get to know each other.

All except an English couple and an English woman and myself were Americans whose ancestors had come from Eire. These were good for some weird and wonderful stories.

It is not quite true to say I have no Irish ancestry. I have a couple of Irish maternal grandparents. But as one side came from Catholic Cork and the other from Protestant Ulster — and I wasn't going to Ulster — decided not to show any partiality. However, one of my fellow travellers, Veronica Morison, insisted I was the image of her Aunt Mary from Cork.

Haze on Mountains

Our first day out of Dublin heading for Wexford in the south we had our first real look at the celebrated Irish scenery — the greens of the country and the blue haze over the Wicklow Mountains.

On this first day also gained a little more insight into the Irish character. At Bray we stopped to have a look at a rather large demon statue. It was erected in honor of a mean man who lived in the past century. Can't recall what his particular sin was—something about money if I recall correctly.

Not only did the Irish people erect the demon statue in this man's honor, they also gave him the honor of unveiling it.

Passed through many ancient little town with narrow streets and tongue-twisting names and into the famous Vale of Avoca with the celebrated meeting of the waters — the big and small Avon rivers.

Here also is Ireland's smallest village, one house, one church, and maybe five or six houses reached by a stone bridge across the Big Avon.

On into the old seaport Arklow driving through forested country with the smell of pine in the air. All over Ireland there are reforestation areas—mostly pine and spruce because "they grow straight."

Breeze Just Fresh

County Wexford are also pioneering — planting saplings along the highways in a beautification plan.

Arriving in Wexford there was a sharp breeze blowing in from the harbor — never a cold wind — only sharp or fresh.

On this first day I also learned that the Irish have the ability to talk about an event of several hundred years ago as if it had happened only a short time ago.

The first time Michael spoke about Cromwell, I thought he was referring to a contemporary. But he wasn't — he meant the old Puritain who carried out such havoc and destruction in the land. Ruined castle after castle and ruined churches bear stark testimony to Cromwell's harshness.

And the Norman invasion could have happened a year or two before that.

Nearing Wexford, Michael pointed to a ruin where he told us an Irish king, Dermot McMurragh, had lived and that he was the man who had started the Norman invasion.

Now it certainly is history that Dermot MacMurragh appealed the Henry II for help in repelling his enemies and to regain his lost territory, and though Henry couldn't supply the help himself he did give permission for Dermot to recruit Norman soldiers.

But hear Michael's story and then make up your own mind if Dermot MacMurragh really started the invasion single-handed.

Call Sent for Help

This is what he told us:

A neighboring king of Dermot's was a man by the name of O'Rourke. One time while O'Rourke was away fighting, MacMurragh abducted his wife. (He did say that history does not record whether or not she went willingly.)

When O'Rourke returned home and found his wife living in another king's castle he sent out a call across the country for help.

"Irish take a very dim view of that sort of thing," said Michael so O'Rourke has no trouble at all in having men rally to his side. Dermot was defeated with the result that he lost both much of his land and O'Rourke's wife.

That story was told without one word of censure for the woman.

Michael had sounded so concerned about "Irishmen taking a dim view of that sort of thing" that I mentioned later that he sounded as if Irishmen still felt that way today.

He immediately became serious and told me that they certainly did and that he could speak for all Irishmen when he said that they have a poor opinion of "a man that will play around with another man's wife." Still no criticism of the woman.

I found Irishmen most courteous to women.

Girls' Home Given Loan

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corp. has approved a $15,000 loan to Immanual Evangelical Lutheran Church in this Vancouver suburb to help finance a permanent home for teen-age girls. Six girls between the ages of 14 and 18 will be accommodated at the hostel, which will be under supervision by the church and government welfare agencies.

Food, Housing Major Factors

July Living-Cost Rise Slower

OTTAWA (CP) — The climb was slower than a month earlier, but the consumer price index continues to move upward in July as it reached 126.4 — which means goods that cost $100 in 1961 now cost $126.40.

In July, 1968, the index stood at 120.4, or five per cent below the present figure.

★ ★ ★

The monthly report by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics Tuesday shows the index increased by half a point, or four-tenths of one per cent, over the June figure, and most of the increase was attributed to higher food and housing costs.

★ ★ ★

The food component of the index rose eight-tenths of one per cent, while housing went up four-tenths of one per cent.

But the report said the increase in food prices "was less than normally expected during this period." And some of the increase was due to higher restaurant prices.

After a walloping 12-per-cent increase in beef prices during June, these meats declined by four per cent in July. But pork went up by 2.3 per cent and poultry rose by nine-tenths of one per cent.

★ ★ ★

There were also "marked advances" in fruit and vegetables and potato prices increased by 13 per cent. Tomato prices declined by 14 per cent.

There was a slight increase in bakery and cereal products.

Milk prices remained unchanged but ice cream, cheese and some other dairy products went up in price. Butter, margarine and eggs declined marginally.

The food component of the index was 5.1 per cent higher than a year earlier.

★ ★ ★

In revising the index each month, the bureau surveys about 300 items of goods and services and measures prices against a 1961 base of 100.

The latest available index for weekly wages and salaries is an April figure of 123.4, also based on a 1961 level of 100. This means that salaries which averaged $100 in 1961 now average $123.40. The figure for April, 1968, would equal $119.30.

★ ★ ★

The 5 percent price increase over July, 1968, compares with a 5.2 percent increase in June over the same month of 1968. The May figure was up 4.7 per cent from May, 1968, and the April figure increased by 4.4 per cent over the same month of the previous year.

In the first three months of this year, the index was higher than in the same period of 1968, but the increase for each month was less than four per cent.

★ ★ ★

Until the beginning of this year, the index was based on 1949 prices as 100 points. If this measurement was still being used, the July figure would be 163.3.

There are seven main components in the index. Housing counts for about a third of them and food for more than a quarter.

The July housing component was pushed upward to 125.2 mainly by higher interest rates and rents. Home-ownership costs rose by six-tenths of one per cent, while rents went up by four-tenths of one per cent.

★ ★ ★

The report also showed higher wages for domestic help and increased prices for broadloom, household textiles, utensils and other supplies. This contributed to an increase of four-tenths of one per cent in the cost of household operation.

Higher electricity prices in Halifax, Saint John, N.B., and Hamilton also contributed.

The clothing component declined by one-tenth of one per cent to 124.8, and the transportation index went up by the same percentage mainly because of seasonally higher rail fares.

★ ★ ★

The health and personal care index remained unchanged at 134.2, and the recreation and reading component also remained steady at 127.4.

The tobacco and alcohol index increased by four-tenths of one per cent, to 126.3, but the report said this was due almost entirely to higher tobacco taxes in Alberta.

Craft Just Hobby in Canada

Objective: Applied Arts School

By HELEN MORRIS

"Art is a part of life in Europe. Here it is not . . . it is a hobby, a thing apart."

Mr. and Mrs. Jan Grove, 2218 Sooke Road, are German-born potters who find the state of crafts in Canada rather discouraging.

Jan and Helga went to Istanbul from Germany in 1960, where Mr. Grove had a position as instructor at the Istanbul School of Applied Fine Arts.

★ ★ ★

He found Turkey fascinating. "It was invaded by so many people. Everyone left their traces in art . . . Pottery was one of the things that survived. Some people even wrote letters on pottery. I think European pottery was partly influenced by the Near East."

Most of the department heads at the university were German-born, Mr. Grove said. The government had invited them "to set up a new direction in Turkish art, where the function was important rather than art for art's sake."

But teaching became too time-consuming, and campus politics too involving for a man who desired to be an artist, rather than a teacher or administrator.

★ ★ ★

"In 1965 I decided to leave Istanbul. I was head of the ceramics department. My own work was pressed in the background . . . You give too much to the student and you can't do anything yourself."

So on the advice of Herbert Siebner, a local painter, the Groves came to Victoria. They bought a mink farm in Colwood and converted it into a potter's studio and begain to work again as a team—Jan throwing pots, and Helga decorating them.

They make clay soulptures as well as pottery, and their work has been shown all over Canada, and beyond. Jan had a spot in Expo' 67; and in the National Gallery, the permanent collection in Charlottetown, and Windsor, Ontario's gallery. The external affairs department has bought some pieces from them, and Jan has no idea where they may be now.

But Canada looks on crafts differently than Europe.

Jan taught pottery as a night-class at the University of Victoria for two years, but he found that his art was looked upon by most people, both students and university officials, as a hobby, rather than, as Helga says, "a part of life."

★ ★ ★

Neither Jan nor Helga consider their work a hobby.

For one thing, it is their only source of income. "You can count on one hand potters in all of Canada who earn their living only on their work." Helga says. She thinks that the guild system in Germany, is one of the reasons that arts such as pottery are incorporated into the people's way-of-life."

And the guilds ensure that the art will not be mistaught. "You cannot sell work as your own until you are a Master." Jan says that here "everyone who has smelled a pot starts to teach." He has had students who have taken a three-week course from him and then began to teach on their own."

The Groves feel that the only way to make crafts, pottery included a part of Canadian life would be to start a school solely for the teaching of applied arts. "Victoria would be a good place to start such a school," Jan says. He thinks the city could become the Canadian centre for applied arts.

★ ★ ★

And Helga emphasizes that the teachers for such a school would have to be carefully-chosen. "It's not true that a student learns from a bad teacher . . . So many students learn not only poor technique, but also bad taste from their instructors."

And, at least in Victoria now, no one is going to become a potter to find the soft life.

Helga says "There's no such thing as a rich potter."

Although people complain about the monotony of manufactured products, they are not willing to pay for the artistry of a handmade product. It's impossible to compare the price of something made in a few seconds, and by the millions, on a machine to something made in perhaps hours, and only once, by an artist.

★ ★ ★

But people do make such comparisons, Helga says. "They don't realize how much time and learning and bad results we go through until almost everything is good."

And the Groves refuse to use molds to make their work easier, and probably more financially rewarding. They "don't like molds . . . everything has to have a freshness."

And it has.

Madcap Matinee

ROCK HILL, S.C. (UPI) — The Mad Mummy of Rock Hill came undone Monday — and no wonder, what with a bunch of screaming kids chasing him through a darkened theatre.

"They tried to kill me!" gasped Charles Norton, 16, whom the management had hired to play a "live monster" to liven up the showing of The Lemon Grove Kids Meet the Monsters.

As thunder crashed and lightning flashed on the screen, Norton stepped onto the stage in a mummy costume, complete with what he describes as a "horrible mask."

"I was supposed to holler a little," he said — "Like, arrgh."

But the children in the crowded 597-seat movie house didn't scare that easily. They charged Norton, punching and pinching until they knocked him down. Norton fled through a back door, with a pack of noisy youngsters on his heels, and locked himself in the manager's office.

After a few minutes, he decided his pursuers were gone. He opened the door and discovered he was wrong. The kids chased him to the projection room, throwing paper cups and ice.

"They had to stop the movie and turn on the lights before the kids would settle down," said Norton, who said he was through with show business.

When Skin Sags on Face and Neck

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

Derby Ticket Number Right

The mid-Island salmon arrived in time for the Parksville Fish and Game Club's annual salmon derby last weekend, with 243 salmon entered between Friday evening and 7 p.m. Sunday.

Biggest salmon was a 25.9-pound spring (chinook) landed off Claytons by K. Wernicke of Nanoose Bay, who held ticket No. 1 in the derby.

D. Dougan of Vancouver landed an 18-pounder at French Creek to win second prize.

TIE FOR COHO

There was a tie for the heaviest coho, nine-pounders weighed in by George Evans, who landed his fish at Qualicum, and Orest Kalyn, who landed his coho off Claytons.

Mrs. A. Lowe of Nanaimo won the women's prize with a 9.4-pound spring (chinook) and 13-year-old Ken Roberts of Parksville took the junior prize with a 7.8-pounder.

More than 700 persons attended the salmon barbecue Sunday afternoon.

JULY WINNER

Alf Joyce took the VSIAA monthly trophy for July with a 21.10-pounder. Women's trophy was won by Mrs. H. Nelson with a 15.14-pounder and Jeff Mair took the junior trophy with an 18-10-pounder. All the winners came from Finlayson Arm. Hidden weight winners were Mrs. C. Hammon, E. J. Brown, A. Rosin and Roy Fleming.

The Chinook Club Sunburn Derby for August has been cancelled.

New Look for Halifax

Downtown Halifax, familiar to many Victoria residents because of service connections, has new look now. Central Barrington Street has been transformed into pedestrian mall, with all traffic banned except city buses. Mall is experiment sought by downtown merchants.—(CP)

Courtroom Parade

Marijuana Term Light

A 20-year-old youth was sentenced Tuesday to one day in jail after pleading guilty in Victoria Provincial Court to a charge of possessing marijuana.

P. J. Higgins of 1270 Tracksell, arrested several weeks ago with two marijuana cigarettes in his possession, was also placed on a good-behavior bond for 18 months.

In spite of the unusually light sentence, Judge William Ostler warned each case would be judged on its own merits.

'NOT PRECEDENT'

"The emphasis in sentencing these cases is still on the deterrent aspect, and the light sentence in this particular case should not be regarded as a precedent."

He noted Higgins could be regarded as a "borderline case," but went on to say that he would continue to follow the rules laid down by the B.C. Appeal Court which stated charges of possessing marijuana should be followed by a deterring sentence.

"The judge's personal views must be disregarded, but I think I can justify calling this case an exception," he said.

MORE CAREFUL

Court was told Higgins had just entered into an apprenticeship and had become more careful in his choice of friends.

Speaking to the accused's father, Judge Ostler said he should endeavour to exercise a "great deal of influence" on his son during the next 18 months.

□

A 42-year-old man was found guilty of vagrancy and was sentenced to 20 days in jail.

Court was told George W. Muller was found asleep on the veranda of a house when police arrested him.

Muller told court he had lived at the address before and had returned to pick up some of his belongings. Judge Ostler told him it was very unlikely to pick up one's belongings at 1:30 in the morning, five months after one has moved out of the place.

"The officer also said you were intoxicated," Judge Ostler said.

□

Richard A. Cleverdon, 39, of 540 Simcoe, was remanded until Aug. 19 for sentence and pre-sentence report after pleading guilty to charges of indecent assault and indecent exposure.

Norman E. Gilchrist, 33, of Parksville, was fined $50 after pleading guilty to consuming liquor in a public place.

□

A 20-year-old youth was sentenced to 10 months in jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of car theft.

David R. Cole of no fixed address was told by Judge Ostler to find a job and earn money if he wanted to drive a car.

"Your pre-sentence report is not very encouraging. Are you so obsessed with driving an automobile that you go out and steal other poeple's cars?"

□

A 25-year-old man was fined $400 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving. Willard R. Wedge of CFB Esquimalt was arrested after the car he was driving hit a tree and a fence on Craigflower Road.

Few at Saanich Meeting

Duplex Issue Shelved Again

A controversial proposal to ban duplexes from many areas of Saanich was tabled Monday night by council after several hours of discussion.

Although the plan to rezone parts of the municipality to prohibit duplexes raised a furor when it was first put forward about three months ago, only about 40 persons attended Monday's meeting.

Council decided unanimously to return the proposal to lands and planning committee, "taking into consideration the possibility of rezoning sections" of the municipality.

Community groups from Cadboro Bay, Gordon Head and Cordova Bay will be invited to discuss the zoning policy.

The rezoning would affect mainly farming and rural areas and parts of Gordon Head. Duplexes already are prohibited in Ten Mile Point, Queenswood, Cadboro Bay, Broadmead, parts of Cordova Bay Ridge and the Cedarglen-Shelbourne area.

The move was opposed by 13 persons, some of them against extension of single-family-only areas and others wanting such restrictions in their own areas.

MORE OPINIONS

Ald. Leslie Passmore noted that only three or four of those speaking at the meeting were from outside Gordon Head and he didn't think the whole proposal should be accepted or rejected without more representation from other areas.

The issue started last May when Gordon Head residents protested the building of proposed duplexes near them. Council then voted to eliminate duplexes from all residential zoning in Saanich, then reversed its decision at the next meeting.

Action taken Monday night was a result of further discussion and reports.

Loss $150,000 In Kelowna

KELOWNA (CP) — Damage claims submitted by merchants and residents whose windows were shattered a week ago by a sonic boom should not exceed $150,000, a federal adjuster said Tuesday.

J. C. Gavey, general manager of investigations for the defence department said in an interview that the original damage estimate of $250,000 is too high.

About 75 per cent of windows in an eight-block section of this Okanagan Valley city were smashed by a sonic shock wave released by a jet of the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels aerobatic team which accidentally broke the sound barrier while practising for a demonstration.

Four glass companies were still busy repairing the damage claimed by 300 residents and businessmen as Mr. Gavey reported most of the claims were in.

NATO will eventually pay for the damage but the federal government must first reimburse local residents before negotiating a settlement with the U.S. state department.

Two Positions For Director

A director has been appointed for the 170-bed Eric Martin Institute for mental patients. He is Clifford A. Brown, former executive assistant to Royal Jubilee Hospital executive director Dr. A. C. Pickles, and he has also been appointed assistant director of the Jubilee hospital.

All Candidates Given Time

Victoria Jaycees will sponsor an all-candidates political meeting at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 20, at Central junior high school.

Farmers' Cash Shortage Trims Regina's Budget

REGINA (CP)—Provincial Treasurer D. G. Steuart said Tuesday the Saskatchewan government, faced with a shortage of cash among farmers, hopes to trim its 1969-70 expenditures by $12,000,000.

The five-per-cent sales tax, one of the province's biggest single revenue sources, was expected to yield $68,780,000 in the current fiscal year.

The budget for the fiscal year that began April 1 called for total expenditures of $365,000,000.

Sales tax revenues during the first half of 1969 are down 13 per cent from the same period last year, Steuart said, a trend that could mean a loss of about $10,000,000 in revenue if it continues throughout 1969.

Steuart said he is hopeful that the economic outlook will improve with federal cash advances to farmers, and expects a balanced 1969-70 budget regardless. The province could have "really serious problems" in the next six months but the economy was basically sound.

Steuart said the province would be in "a lot tougher shape" if it had not made a good start towards industrial diversification.

A white paper on the province's economy said net agricultural production last year fell to $664,000,000, down 9.5 per cent from 1967 and the lowest level in four years.

The semi-annual white paper, said the main reason for the decline was the poor quality of grain harvested. Farm cash incomes fell to $905,000,000, down 6.9 per cent from 1967.

Scale Down

I think almost every really keen gardener looks forward to his retirement as a time when he will be able to devote most of his waking hours to his garden, making ardent love to Mother Earth rather than the usual weekend lick-and-a-promise.

One common error, however, is to take on too much garden.

It is an unfortunate but indisputable fact that the older one gets, the farther it is to the ground. Getting down to it is hard; getting up from a kneeling, stooping or squatting position is even harder.

Planting and weeding, strenuous jobs at any age, become miserable chores as old joints stiffen.

It is a wise move, therefore, to incorporate in the plans for your retirement garden some ideas to make the work less onerous as time goes by, so that maximum enjoyment of our beloved hobby can be obtained with a minimum of pain and discomfort.

I would suggest a plan of gradually scaling down. The first year or so can be spent in reducing the size of the working area to manageable proportions, at the same time making changes gradually to cut down on the amount of bending, stooping and kneeling required to maintain the place.

It is a wise move to use small trees and medium-size shrubs at the extremities of the garden. Annual flowers are harder on the back and knees than any other class of plants, with the possible exception of strawberries, and the areas devoted to these may be gradually reduced, replacing them with the trouble-free, non-staking kinds of herbaceous perennials, shrubs and small trees.

Roses — particularly the shrub roses — and dahlias can be grown with little attention and a minimum of stooping as long as you grow them for garden decoration rather than for exhibition purposes.

The vegetable plot should undergo the same gradual shrinking process. We all tend to grow far more beans, lettuce, carrots and tomatoes than we can possibly use, and we find ourselves giving away half our crop to the neighbors — last year I had such a glut of marrows and squash I couldn't even give them away.

★ ★ ★

This is all very nice for the neighbors, but an enormous waste of energy on the part of the elderly grower. That energy is better used to grow only those vegetables that give you and your family special pleasure, producing only enough for your own needs.

Asparagus, for instance, tastes especially good when you think what it would cost you in the stores, and nowadays, with chemical weeding, an established bed can be managed with very little strain on the back and legs except for cutting the crop.

Vacated vegetable ground can be put down to lawn or planted up with small fruit trees and with soft fruit bushes.

In the earlier stages of the replanning, those who have a garden on sloping ground might well consider having it terraced; level ground is easier to work than slopes, and raised beds can be managed without any stooping at all.

A cheap material for retaining walls is broken concrete paving — certainly not as good-looking as a dry rock wall, but it weathers down in time.

★ ★ ★

Needless to say, one starts at an early stage to replace heavy garden tools with others of lighter weight.

A long-handled shovel in what is called "lady's size" can keep you digging long after the time when a conventional spade become burdensome.

A small-bladed hoe with either the stirrup or the more modern crescent-shaped blade will take care of the weeds with little effort, and a modern lightweight plastic watering can should replace the big galvanized one.

Long-handled shears made of aluminum tubing are a joy to use for the trimming of shaggy edges where lawns meet flower beds.

ARTHUR HOPPE

Busman's Holiday

President Nixon is taking a month-long vacation at his little 10-room beach cottage in San Clemente. And, Lord knows, he needs one.

After his harrowing adventures leading an expedition to the moon and his triumphal global tour in which he thought up numerous new foreign policies on the spot, his nerves must be frazzled.

It'll do him a world of good to get away from it all. If he can. You know how vacations are. Particularly for dynamic political leaders.

★ ★ ★

"Oh, Dick, just think, it's the first day of our vacation together. Now remember, you promised me to forget all about politics and the burdens of your office."

"Gosh, Pat, I never forget my promises, whatever they may be. I'm not going to get involved in anything. Say, where are Ron and Herb?"

"They're out surfing, dear. You can see them from the window."

★ ★ ★

"Oh, yes, there they are. And, my, look at all those cameramen waiting for them on the beach. I think I might just go down there and . . ."

"Now, Dick, you promised . . . Goodness, he's gone already."

"Hi, there, Hi. Ron and Herb. I want you to know that I think I'm the luckiest man in the world because I have the privilege of speaking for so many in welcoming you back.

"This is the greatest thing in the history of the world since the Creation, because you've proved we're real surfers. And I know as I travel around San Clemente here that all the San Clementeans will agree.

"But most important, I am going to pay a call on two of—in my view—two of the greatest and most courageous ladies in the world today—your wives, Ron and Herb. And I've got to let you in on a little secret: I'm going to invite them to a great big dinner in your honor. And all I want to know is, will you come, too?

★ ★ ★

"One more question that I think all of us would like to ask. When you were bouncing around on those surfboards out there in the Pacific, did you get seasick? Well, that's fine. And now I better go tell Pat about the dinner."

"My goodness, Dick, 1500 people to dinner? What will they say in the kitchen?"

"Let me say this, Pat, the people in the kitchen must be left alone to solve their own problems. I hereby solemnly pledge that we will never again become entangled in kitchen affairs."

"Oh, that's wonderful, dear. But where are you going now?"

★ ★ ★

"Why to tell the kitchen people about my solemn pledge. Hi! Hi, there, kitchen people. I just want you to know that you can always count on Pat and me to stand behind you as you stir the soup and peel the parsnips. I have always felt you deserve higher pay and more time off. Now let me show you a better way to mash potatoes and . . ."

"Excuse me, dear, for interrupting you. But when are you going back to work at the office?"

"Gosh, Pat, let's not even think of that on the first day of our vacation together. After all, you need a vacation, too."

"Yes, dear, that's why I was asking."

This Is Utopia?

SHEILAH GRAHAM

LONDON (NANA) — What do scholars and philosophers talk about when they are having a conference-cum-vacation in Denmark? Sex, sex, and more sex. This universal topic was obviously on the minds of all the intellectuals, assembled by Commonwealth United in the land of the Vikings for a symposium to formulate the utopian society for the Louis Malle picture, Did Guliver Ever Come Home? It's to be produced by Gershwin, Kastner and Kanter.

★ ★ ★

In the ideal society, agreed pundits Herman Kahn, Robert Ardrey, Bruno Bettelheim, Desmond Morris and Max Lerner, among others, "all sorts of sexual experiences should be permitted, assuming there is a perfect contraception system. Incest, they believed, would be harmless if children would not be the end result. There would be pairings-off for a limited number of years, then you change your partner and on with the dance.

★ ★ ★

Dr. Bettelheim thought that marriage contracts should not run longer than seven years. (What a blow to the women who feel that, because a man has promised to love, honor and support them, they have the right to tie him forever with hoops of steel!) Desmond Morris would like the perfect society to remove the children from their parents after puberty.

★ ★ ★

Robert Ardery was shocked at the idea that this utopia would eliminate all feelings of guilt no matter what you did. "It would be nothing more than "boy Scoutania" he said, a world of superficial flatheads, operating in a world without shame."

Herman Kahn's dream world would deny the existence of God, "but you must have ritual." Birth would be very ritualistic. As would death.

★ ★ ★

Desmond Morris thought perhaps that everyone over 40 should be killed, unless there was infanticide. And the important area of reproduction should be organized by the people who would decide who should have children and how many.

★ ★ ★

"It would be an amoral society," said Anthony Unger who is executive producer for Commonwealth United. One thing all of the intellectuals were agreed on: Not one of them would like to live in this nightmarish utopia. Anyway, the film, to be directed by Louis Malle, will be put into production in 1971. There are many details to be worked out, as you can well imagine.

★ ★ ★

Commonwealth, which has made six pictures in Europe during the past year, will be turning its attention to America — not necessarily Hollywood. In production at the moment is Tom Lynn — originally titled Tam-Lin, then Toys. The only problem with Tom Lynn is that the star is Ava Gardner — and will Ava relish having a male name as the title?

★ ★ ★

Also coming up for Commonwealth is The Chill, and Frank Sinatra is interested in starring. They are now deciding whether the hero shall be a cop or a reporter. This will be filmed in San Diego, California.

SYDNEY HARRIS

Lopsided Equation

In this difficult period of transition we are living through, our society has not yet arrived at the proper equation between men and machines. Machines should be used for tasks that are subhuman or superhuman, but they cannot replace the human factor without doing more harm than good.

★ ★ ★

One dramatic example of our lopsided equation today is provided by Dr. Robert H. Moser, chief of the department of medicine at Walter Reed Hospital. In a recent issue of Medical Opinion and Review he discussed the new coronary care units in the treatment of heart attacks.

Stressing the importance of the first 24 hours in the detection and correction of these acute infarctions, he points out that "Glistening hardware that bleeps and flashes ominous signals is worthless without a human receptor capable of swift, disciplined response."

★ ★ ★

Many hospitals, he suggests, have not grasped the concept of acute coronary care: "It seems I am always stumbling over pudgy hospital administrators who display their recently acquired electronic gadgetry with an emotion reminiscent of an octogenarian presenting a recently sired son. The sophisticated hardware is trumpeted with the same eagerness as the pump oxygenator and the hemodialyzer, other symbols of hospital influence.

"The only problem," he goes on, "is that in the small hours of the night the dials and lights are patrolled by a frightened, half-green technician perched on the edge of panic, whose only function is to press an appropriate button to summon a physician from a distant corner of the hospital. The presence of the equipment provides some ridiculous kind of proprietary pride—or, worse., a feeling of security.

★ ★ ★

"It would be highly preferable," Dr. Moser suggests, "to have a well-trained attendant or nurse who is able to look at a patient, make a rapid assessment . . . and take immediate corrective action while pushing the button. Coronary care units have significantly decreased mortality in (heart attacks), but there is an urgent need for personnel to man the machines."

An estimate in the Annals of Internal Medicine last year showed that an output of some 60,000 coronary care nurses would be needed to give full coverage in the U.S. alone — whereas the coronary care program was turning out only about 1,000 nurses each year. If the present units can't be adequately staffed, how can we possibly expand the program?

★ ★ ★

Reliance on technology can become a terrible trap, if this technology is looked upon as a substitute for people rather than as an added tool for human skill, judgment and concern. Those bleeps and flashes can only warn; they cannot cure, and they do not care.

Treaty of Rome Sets Up Wilson 'Arrest'

PENZANCE, England (UPI) — A 27-year-old gravedigger said Tuesday he will sail for the Scilly Isles this week to arrest British Premier Harold Wilson on a charge of treason.

Warner Williams of Bebington, England, who spent two years studying laws dating back to the Magna Carta, said he would charge Wilson with violation of an ancient civil rights regulation.

* * *

Williams said that, in applying for British membership in the European Common Market, Wilson "conspired with foreign powers to place an authority — Brussels Council — above the sovereign."

This, according to the Treaty of Rome," "is treason," he said.

Williams vowed that if Wilson resisted arrest he would "use force." He said he would carry along a "private persons warrant" which he drafted himself and that he would row the prime minister back to Cornwall and march him to a police station.

* * *

One lawyer said there was nothing to stop Williams from trying but that "it is a case of how far he's likely to get before the magistrates."

The Home Office said it had never heard anything like it.

The Scilly Isles, where Wilson was staying, are off Britain's southwest coast.

UN Fixes Deadline For South Africa

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) —The United Nations Security Council Tuesday gave South Africa until Oct. 4 to end its administration of South-West Africa or face possible UN sanctions.

Approving a resolution submitted by African, Asian and Latin American members, the council condemned the South African government for refusing to comply with the UN request in March that it withdraw immediately from the mineral-rich territory.

South Africa, which was given a mandate over South-West Africa by the now-defunct League of Nations after the First World War has refused to give up sovereignty over the former German colony and has defied previous UN resolutions to this effect.

The council called on all states to refrain from all dealings with the South African government "purporting to act on behalf of the territory of Namibia" the native name for South-West Africa.

Five Children Chipper Despite Plight

MIAMI (UPI)—Five sprightly children, the oldest 16 and the youngest six, were abandoned in front of a Miami bus station Tuesday. They told police their father's parting words were: "I'm tired of all of you."

Police turned the youngsters over to juvenile authorities and began a search for the mother and father, identified by the children as Jim and Florence Johnston of Lockport, N.Y.

* * *

The children told police their mother had said there was no longer enough money in the family to feed and clothe them, and that their father had said he was tired of them. The parents left them in front of the downtown bus station and drove off in their 1959 sedan. the youngsters said.

The boys—Larry, 14, John, 9, Roy, 8, and Billy, 6—all had burr hearcuts they said their father gave them in a motel room after they arrived in Miami three days ago. They said they drove to Maimi from New York City. The oldest of the children, 16-year-old Laura, told police:

"I hope we don't get split up. I've always sort of taken care of the others when mother was at work."

* * *

The children seemed chipper despite their plight. A juvenile officer tried to start his interrogation in a light vein by asking, "Which one of you fellas is the troublemaker?"

Billy, the youngest, giggled, "I am."

The boys grinned at each other as television cameras aimed at them but the long-haired, pretty girl seemed shy at all the attention.

Panel Discussions For Youth Week

For youths interested in trying to learn from one another—Victoria Youth Council is sponsoring its third annual Youth Week, beginning Saturday.

A Cool-Aid-Youth Week benefit dance at 8 p.m. Saturday in the First United Church Fellowship Hall will start the week.

At 2 p.m. Sunday the council will hold an open meeting in the YMCA. And one of the highlights of the week, the Vancouver Island youth film festival, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. in the National Film Board theatre, 811 Wharf. The council has been supplying all the necessary equipment for "young people interested in exploring their own creativity."

PANEL DISCUSSIONS

Panel discussions headed by various well-informed authorities will supply the meat for the conference.

A discussion "considering reasons for high school and university student unrest" will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in Victoria High School auditorium.

Tuesday it's "What's not happening in Greater Victoria," "a discussion about the recreational, social, and cultural resources available to Victoria youth." It's scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Victoria high school auditorium and will be followed at 8 p.m. by a discussion on youth and dope, at the same location.

PARADE, SHOW

Wednesday is a day off from discussion for a parade, puppet show, band concert, play and a musical—all at Centennial Square.

Thursday a discussion on Red Power to be held at 8 p.m. in the student union building at the University of Victoria.

The First Vancouver Island Youth Conference begins Friday with a get-together at 8 p.m. in UVic's student union building.

The conference hopes to find "common ground, something to share, mutual interests among change-directed youth."

Body Pulled From Inlet

Arctic Oil Voyage Benefits Seen

Canada Could Win Wager by U.S.

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could be the big winner in a multi-million-dollar American gamble to prove that huge oil tankers can navigate the Northwest Passage on a year-round basis.

Humble Oil and Refinery Co. of Houston is spending $30,000,000 to send the 150,000-ton Manhattan through the passage starting Friday in hopes Alaskan oil eventually can be moved cheaply by ship to the east coast of the United States.

The Manhattan, about 1,000 feet long, is the largest ship ever to attempt the ice-infested waters of the passage. If successful, it could be the forerunner of tankers twice as big transporting up to 30,000,000,000 barrels of crude oil from the potentially-rich northern slope of Alaska to the American market.

"The tanker route would enable us to bring crude oil to the Atlantic seaboard at a substantial cost advantage over alternate methods of transportation," says Humble president Charles Jones.

One estimate is that oil moved by the tanker would cost 60 cents a barrel less than oil moved by pipeline.

Canada's contribution to the daring gamble is Arctic experience, the use of the icebreaker John A. Macdonald, aircraft fitted with special remote sensing equipment for mapping and assessing ice conditions in the passage, and the services of meteorological and telecommunications bases across the Arctic.

Because of its contributions, Canada will share in most of the scientific data gleaned from the historic venture.

If the Manhattan successfully charts a tanker route, then it follows that any oil found in the Canadian Arctic can be transported by the same route. Ottawa officials have long maintained that Arctic oil must be low-cost oil to penetrate world markets. Thus, cheap transportation is a must.

A shipping route also would make feasible development of any large mineral discoveries such as the iron ore deposits discovered at Mary River on Baffin Island.

Said to be the richest find of iron ore in the world and among the largest, the Mary River mines have been left untapped because of the short shipping season in the Canadian North.

School Taxes On Property Going—Berger

By IAN STREET

An NDP government would not remove school taxes from property during its first term of office but it would take the first step towards this goal. NDP leader Tom Berger said Tuesday.

* * *

He told a press conference here that it remains one of the goals of the NDP to remove the burden of school taxes from property. But the cost of education cannot be taken out of general revenue until an alternative source of revenue is found, the leader added.

* * *

Victory at the polls Aug. 27 would allow an NDP government to take the first step towards this goal, however, by decreeing that the financing and operation of regional colleges are a provincial rather than a local responsibility.

"We don't think the local taxpayer should be forced to pay so much for education that he rebels when asked to pay more," Mr. Berger said. "Voters are turning down regional colleges all over the province and I don't blame them."

* * *

He noted that the Liberals are promising in this election that they will remove school taxes from property. Mr. Berger added: "Dr. McGeer can say that because he is not going to be faced with this responsibility, but I think we might be."

The NDP leader stressed that if his party forms the next government it would not take away the provincial homeowner grant.

"The homeowner grant is something that people rely upon," he said, "and under an NDP government they will continue to get it."

The press conference was attended by several executive members of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association

NDP leader Tom Berger said Tuesday there would be "no wholesale firings" in the civil service if his party forms the next provincial government but added that certain top officials would be replaced.

He was commenting in an interview following a press conference on published reports in which the NDP leader was quoted as saying half a dozen deputy ministers would be fired following an NDP victory at the polls Aug. 27.

* * *

"We've got a lot of first class people in the civil service," Mr. Berger said. "We're going to give them bargaining rights so that they can protect themselves from the government, their employer.

"But there are cases I think where people who served this government well, who served Bennett well, will not really fit into a New Democratic administration."

He added: "We think these

Takeover by London Urged

Riots Rip Ulster

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

LONDONDERRY (UPI) — Police using armored cars and tear gas and followed by gangs of stone-throwing Protestant youths battled Catholic rioters Tuesday and early today, prompted the Ulster government to consider calling in British troops.

Catholic civil rights leaders and members of parliament urged Britain to suspend Northern Ireland's constitution and take over governing powers.

WILD BATTLE

It stretched through the evening and into the early hours of today — a wild battle scene that saw Catholics barricaded inside their own Bogside District hurling firebombs and bricks into the faces of police who came on firing water cannon and finally tear gas.

(Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark held an emergency meeting of his cabinet security committee in Belfast and told newsmen "the calling in of British troops is one of the options open to my government in the present situation.")

Opponents of that course, including many in Britain, have argued such a move would be tantamount to handing over the government of Northern Ireland to London.

'DOOMSDAY RIOT'

The new violence in Londonderry, second largest city in Ulster and the major town holding a Roman Catholic majority here, confirmed the worst fears of those who said the Protestant celebration could turn into a doomsday of rioting.

Some 20,000 of this country's majority Protestants gathered here Tuesday to celebrate the 280th anniversary of the defeat by Protestant forces of the armies of deposed King James II of England. James was a Catholic monarch trying to fight his way back to the throne.

The brawls started with the stoning of the parade, police said, and then spread to the Bogside area outside the old city walls. There Catholics made a fortress of their home terrain with street barricades.

GIRLS MAKE BOMBS

Teenage girls filled and stuffed gasoline bombs and passed the ammunition to their men, who heaved them down atop police advancing on foot and in armored cars. Behind the police armored cars, protestant youths advanced like wary riflemen, grabbing handfuls of stones from wheelbarrows pushed by their girls and tossing them at the Catholics.

Some 85 policemen had been injured by early today, at least eight seriously. More than 150 persons received first aid behind the Catholic barricades.

'KEEP FIGHTING'

Bernadette Devlin, a Catholic civil rights leader and member of British parliament, issued a joint statement with civil rights leader Eamonn McCann, saying the riots proved "Northern Ireland is ungovernable under the present constitution . . ."

They urged Catholics to keep fighting until the British government "states its clear commitment to the suspension of the constitution and called immediately a constitutional conference."

POLICEMAN ABLAZE

One policeman was set afire and "seriously injured" when a gasoline bomb hit him in the chest exploding onto his face. His comrades rolled him on the ground and took him to hospital.

In bogside behind the lines young women, mostly wearing jeans and sweaters, hustled up ammunition for their men.

"They've had this coming for a long time," said pretty, dark-haired shopgirl Maureen Roche. "We've had to put up with their bullying for years.

An elderly couple, arm-in-arm, stood fearfully in a doorway.

"My two sons are out there and I wouldn't have them anywhere else," said Mrs. Bridget Lynch, her husband nodding agreement.

Jet Overshoots, Injures Four On Highway

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands (UPI)—A Caribair DC9 jetliner Tuesday crashed through a fence at the end of a runway while landing and injured four persons on the ground as it slammed into six cars on a busy highway. The 103 persons on the plane were not hurt.

The two-engine jet operated by the Puerto Rico-based Caribbean Atlantic Airways was making a landing on a flight from San Juan when it rolled off the end of the 5,000-foot runway at Harry S. Truman Airport.

* * *

The plane narrowly averted plowing into fuel pumps at a gasoline station across the highway where an explosive fire would have been virtually certain.

Nobody on the plane was injured but four passengers in cars rammed by the plane as it skidded across the road were hospitalized, one of them in serious condition.

* * *

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said the accident was apparently a result of a failure of the "spoiler" flaps on the wings of the plane, but a Caribair spokesman said the plane apparently skidded on a rain-slippery runway.

Assault-by-Pierre Claimant Takes Too Many Pep Pills

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 17-year-old Niagara Falls, Ont., youth who says Prime Minister Trudeau assaulted him during a demonstration here Friday was taken to Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday for treatment of a suspected drug overdose.

Richard Jesmer told a reporter he had taken "about 20 pep pills or get-up pills," but did not know what type or how strong they were.

Hospital officials said he was in satisfactory condition in the emergency ward.

They said he would be kept in hospital overnight but declined to give any additional details.

Meanwhile, a justice of the peace will decide Friday whether to proceed with a charge of common assault against Mr. Trudeau following a complaint by Jesmer, who says the Liberal leader "is pretty tough for a skinny guy."

The complaint was sworn Monday by Jesmer at Vancouver police headquarters before Justice of the Peace Don Stewart. Jesmer claims Mr. Trudeau "smacked me" during a wild demonstration last Friday night at the Seaforth armory.

The incident is alleged to have taken place during a meeting between the prime minister and 300 anti-Vietnam war demonstrators at which Mr. Trudeau was booed, jeered and pelted with a banana peel.

Mr. Trudeau attended the anti-war rally with the intention of speaking, but was unable to make himself heard. It was held in advance of a $50-a-plate Liberal fund-raising dinner which Mr. Trudeau later addressed inside the armory.

Mr. Stewart said the complaint means Mr. Trudeau "is definitely charged but no evidence has been heard." He said he will hear evidence at 4:15 p.m. PDT Friday and "then I will either issue a summons or not."

NO PROCESS

"It means Mr. Trudeau literally has been charged but there has been no process to command his appearance before any court," said the justice of the peace. "It is at my discretion."

Under the Criminal Code of Canada a common assault charge can be pursued as an indictable offence or a less serious summary conviction.

If dealt with as a summary conviction the maximum pen-

'Phase Out' Better Than Base Closure

HALIFAX (CP) — Tom Morry, assistant deputy minister of national defence, told the National Defence Employees Association convention here Tuesday 3,000 defence employees may be laid off in the department's base consolidation program.

Morry, who was commenting on a statement by the defence employees association president, Clint Hornby of Winnipeg, said:

MAY BE RIGHT

"You say 3,000 people may be cut. You might be right, but I hope you're wrong."

Morry, in a luncheon speech to 230 delegates, said the defence department is in for "belt tightening" and that an announcement of the measures to be taken could come "very soon."

Several Maritime Command military establishments have been mentioned in recent speculation as due for closure or severe reductions in operations.

TIME TO CHANGE

The assistant deputy minister said he would like to see the words "close out" or "closure" replaced with "phase out." This would allow sufficient time for those affected by the changes to re-establish themselves.

He said retraining programs were necessary for those whose jobs might be lost in a consolidation program.

Moon Travellers Report — Parades, Dinner Today

It's Nice Place to Visit

By RUDY ABRAMSON

HOUSTON (LAT) — The first men to visit the moon found it in a way more pleasant than Earth, and their only regret about it is that they did not get to stay longer.

"It's a stark and strangely different place," said Apollo 11 commander Neil Armstrong, "but it looked friendly to me and it was friendly."

* * *

Armstrong said that when he and astronaut Edwin Aldrin landed on the moon's Sea of Tranquility July 20, they immediately found the moon's gentle gravity preferable to that of the earth, or the weightlessness of space.

It was because they felt comfortable that they decided to go right ahead with their walk on the surface rather than take a planned rest period.

With about two-and-one-half hours to work outside, Armstrong said, "we had the problem of a five-year-old boy in a candy store. There were just too many interesting things to do.

"There was far too little time to do the myriad things we wanted to do."

* * *

When Armstrong and Aldrin climbed back into the landing craft eagle after their moon walk, they still had half of their oxygen and a little less than half of their cooking water remaining. But they did not want to come close to exhausting their supply because they were not certain how difficult it would be to get back inside their spacecraft and repressurize its cabin.

* * *

Armstrong, Aldrin, and fellow crewman Michael Collins recounted their adventure in a press conference at the Manned Spacecraft Centre Tuesday.

They were released from quarantine late Sunday, and will set off early today for parades in New York and Chicago before the state dinner in Los Angeles tonight at 8:30 PDT.

Military bands and choruses rehearsed their numbers and White House aides recorded last-minute changes in the guest list Tuesday on the eve of one of the great parties in Los Angeles history.

In the Century Plaza Ballroom, the tune of Fly Me to The Moon mingled with the sound of television technicians setting up their equipment.

Early Wednesday evening 1,600 guests — including 55 astronauts, 44 state governors, leading members of Congress and a glittering assemblance of aviation

Rumor Wins Favor For Minority Rule

ROME (UPI) — The Italian senate Tuesday night endorsed the minority government of Premier Mariano Rumor and thus officially established it in office.

The 322-seat senate gave Rumor a 64-vote majority in the vote of confidence. The chamber of deputies, lower house of Italy's parliament had endorsed Rumor's minority government Sunday with a 51-vote majority.

After failing to heal a breech in the Socialist party and establish a new coalition, Rumor formed a government made up of only his Christian Democrat colleagues. It adopted a program of modified reforms, hoping to stay in office until a new coalition and majority government could be formed.

Immediately after voting, the senate adjourned until mid-September, when the political tempo is expected to pick up sharply as millions of workers and students return from vacation.

Civil Rights Protection

Berger Makes Promise For Ombudsman in B.C.

DUNCAN — An ombudsman to help prevent bureacratic abuse of civil rights will be established at the next legislative session if B.C. choses an NDP government Aug 27, Tom Berger said at a Ducan press conference Tuesday.

The NDP leader, seated beside his predecessor Robert Strachan at a press conference, said a "highly qualified" person would be found to fill the post and investigate complaints against government bureaucratic abuse of power.

Mr. Berger also annouced that the former leader would make the necessary motion at the 1970 legislative session to have debates recorded and published in Hansard form, should an NDP government be in power then.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Berger recalled that Mr. Strachan as opposition leader had repeatedly tried to get House approveal for a Hansard, but without success.

Mr. Berger called Mr. Strachan a "bulwark" of the NDP and the "ablest parliamentarian" in the B.C. Legislature. Cowichan-Malahat, he said, is "one riding we are quite confident of winning."

Mr. Berger repeatedly refused to predict the outcome of the election, but said a "restructuring" of the cabinet would be necessary in an NDP administration. Education, health and lands, forest and water resources departments would be reorganized, he said, and added "my own inclination would be not carry more than one portfolio.

"I would like to remain free of any departmental responsibilities . . . so I could go around and bug other ministers," he said.

He claimed that Premier Bennett's charge, labelling the NDP as Marxist, had misfired and had created a blacklash.

"I am not a Marxist. I am a socialist," said Mr. Berger.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Berger said: "People are tired of Mr. Bennett's wild attacks." Mr. Berger said that as a socialist he believed that the public's interests came before private groups.

Referring to the apple symbol in large advertisements by the B.C. Teachers' Federation Mr. Berger stated some of the NDP candidates may use the symbol in their campaign material.

★ ★ ★

"The teachers have every right to make education an issue in this election."

He said his party was supporting the eight points set forth by the teachers.

Mr. Berger stated that an NDP government would attempt to bring about a new financial formula for education after consulting with teachers, parents and school boards.

When a reporter asked if Mr. Berger had a policy about government help for local recreational facilities, Mr. Strachan appeared to come to the leader's rescue by interjecting: "I would not support Tom Berger as leader of the party if he went around promising ice rinks and parks . . ."

★ ★ ★

To persisting questions, Mr. Strachan suggested that Mr. Bennett or Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan be consulted.

Moving on to a coffee party at the Tzouhalem Hotel, Mr. Strachan introduced Mr. Berger as "the next premier" of B.C. Mr. Berger told about 50 guests that "I don't think Mr. Strachan needs any help to get re-elected, but I do and that's why I'm here."

During his visit to Duncan, Mr. Berger accompanied Mr. Strachan in a visit to Mayor Jim Quaife when a number of local problems were discussed.

Remote Logging Camps

Labor Coercion Claimed

PORT ALBERNI — Social Credit has turned its guns on labor involvement with the New Democratic Party in Alberni riding, charging coercion and strong-arm tactics in remote logging camp settlements.

Dr. Howard McDiarmid, Socred candidate, said Monday: "The NDP is running scared and is resorting to pressure tactics."

The Tofino physician said he had been campaigning in logging camp areas in the north part of the riding.

★ ★ ★

"I talked to a union man there who had been in five different unions in 30 years and he said this was the first time a union official tried to tell him how to vote."

Dr. McDiarmid said the IWA had sent representatives to the small isolated camps when the election was called. He said they took voter registration cards to help complete the enumeration which was admittedly scant in those areas.

"But the IWA went in and tried to limit the cards to those people they felt would vote NDP. This upset a lot of people. Several people in management there said they had never seen the cards."

★ ★ ★

Dr. McDiarmid also claimed that "at Fair Harbor, a union official said all members of the IWA there were obliged to contribute to the campaign fund."

He said he did not have the name of the man.

"These strong arm tactics are winning them more enemies than votes."

★ ★ ★

He said he had a "good reception" at the outlying camps and he visited every poll in the north part of the riding. He spent Sunday at Bamfield where he knocked on 75 per cent of the doors.

"We took Bamfield last time and we'll do it again."

Dr. McDiarmid was to campaign at Tahsis Tuesday and at Gold River Wednesday.

'It's Undemocratic'

Apple Ad Brings Protest From Nanaimo Teacher

NANAIMO — Mrs. Barbara O'Shaughnessy, a Nanaimo district teacher objects to an advertisment by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

The advertisement tell the public that candidates who refuse to put an apple insignia on their political advertising are either opposed to or apathetic toward educational improvements.

"I an very decidely against a campaign that uses coercion upon political candidates," she said.

"By telling boters that the candidates who don't use the apple are either apathetic or antagonistic towar the BCTF proposals is unfair. By this, the BCTF is denying the democratic rights of people — the candidates — to refuse. To deny a politician his democratic rights by use of coercion is itself undemocratic.

"After all, a candidate may be highly in favor of educational improvement policies without necessarily endorsing the specific BCTF campaign.

"The red apple is very restrictive. The canddiate is limited by giving his word to endorse the red apple or is classified as being against all educational improvements.

"However, BCTF should, as a body, be involved in informing the public of the problems of and successes in education.

"As a teacher and a member of BCTF I am for improvements in education. But as a teacher and a citizen I must publicly object to this coercive campaign against all B.C. politicians," said Mrs. O'Shaughnessy.

Sechelt Queen Coming Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Ferries planned to return the Sechelt Queen to runs between Tsawwassen and the Gulf Islands Tuesday or today. The ferry was holed when it hit a rock last week. Damage was minor and the vessel's runs were taken over by the Queen of Sidney.

Liberals Choose Standard-Bearer

DUNCAN — Twenty-six-year-old Jim Bigsby, a Vancouver teacher, was nominated by acclamation as Liberal candidate for Cowichan-Malahat during a Duncan Liberal meeting Tuesday night.

He was proposed by Joe Haddock.

Mr. Bigsby is personal assistant to B.C. Liberal leader Pat McGeer and his main job is in policy work. He is also attending Simon Fraser University, studying for a teacher's certificate.

UVIC GRADUATE

Mr. Bigsby said he may continue for his master's. He is a graduate of UVic where he obtained a BA in economics. After his graduation, he became assistant personnel officer with B.C. Forest Service in Victoria.

He and his wife planned to go to Ghana where he was going to teach but her pregnancy prevented that.

He went instead to Ontario to teach a class of emotionally disturbed and retarded children. It was there that he decided to continue in teaching.

LATE ARRIVAL

Mr. Bigsby was late for the Duncan meeting. He was to have travelled by CPR ferry to Nanaimo but oil pickets prevented the sailing so he went to B.C. Ferries' dock where vessels were delayed because they were being loaded with extra oil in the face of a picket threat.

He said it was ironic as he had planned to speak about industrial relations in B.C. He feels negotiations should be handled by an independent mediation body rather than management, which usually represented Socred views and labor which usually represented NDP views.

North Cowichan, Duncan

Council Aid Sought In Pool Campaign

NORTH COWICHAN — The joint North Cowichan and Duncan recreation commissions decided Tuesday night to request their respective councils to help with the official launching of a fund raising drive for the proposed swimming pool.

The fund-raising campaign is being organized by the recently formed recreation operation committee which consists of service clubs and similar organizations.

Committee chairman Pat Moore suggested Sept. 15 for a kickoff date, but stressed his committee first needs assurance from the two councils that a swimming pool money referendum will be put to ratepayers.

Mr. Moore explained his group hopes to raise between $50,000 and $100,000. Estimated cost of the swimming pool is $400,000.

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife, who attended the meeting as a visitor, said the finance committees of the city and North Cowichan will meet with representatives from three clearing houses to discuss ways and means of financing the swimming pool.

His comments came after Ald. Margaret Robertson and Ald. John Cannon, both of North Cowichan, pointed out the seriousness of the present tight money market. Ald. Martin Lukaitis of Duncan was more optimistic. He insisted half of the bond issue could be sold locally. "I am quite sure of that," he emphasized. Mr. Moore stressed the importance of making the fund drive a community project.

He said, "The committee wants to get the whole community involved. We feel if we are given the opportunity to start the public subscription it would assure the success of the bylaw. I think the fund raising would push the bylaw through."

Mayor Quaife noted the South Cowichan Recreation Commission would be willing to help with the fund raising, and be expressed surprise that the commission was not represented at the meeting.

The joint commissions, Duncan and North Cowichan, agreed to invite representatives from the South Cowichan Recreation Commission to attend future meetings.

Injunction Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The CPR plans to seek a court injunction to halt picketing by oil workers of its ferries to Vancouver Island.

On Tuesday, waterborne pickets prevented the sailing of the Princess of Vancouver to Nanaimo. The B.C. government ferry service was unaffected.

Duncan

Auctioneer Fined In Horse Case

DUNCAN — Auctioneer Keith McCausland, 43, of Duncan was convicted in Duncan Provincial Court Tuesday on a charge of failing to give adequate care to an animal. He was fined $50.

The charge arose from an incident at an auction establishment a few miles south of Duncan June 6. The case involved a horse which arrived with a shipment of other horses from Oregon. Court was told the horse had been injured while the truck in which it was transported was taken by ferry to Vancouver Island.

Crown counsel Alastair Macdonald, in his final statement, noted that the horse, while at the auction establishment, had not been adequately cared for for many hours.

He said it had received neither medical attention nor food or water. The horse had suffered from a deep cut to one of its legs and was bleeding profusely.

Mr. Macdonald said: "This is one instance where there should be a conviction."

Defence counsel Thomas Lines described the case as one in which "everybody gets emotional" because an animal was involved, creating the atmosphere of a witch hunt. He said his client's job was to sell what was on his place and he was neither in custody of the horse nor did he own it.

His request for acquittal was denied by Judge George Hallett who said McCausland was the owner of the property and he should have seen that something was done for the horse.

Three Candidates Agree

NANAIMO — About 300 people attended an all-candidates political forum at the Shoreline Hotel Tuesday night.

The meeting was sponsored by Nanaimo Jaycees.

Liberal Bob Plecas, Socred Frank Ney and NDP Dave Stupich agreed on needs to improve conditions for native Indians, educational programs and institute pollution control. What they disagreed on was which party should do the job.

The question and answer period was frequently disturbed by jeers and interruptions when Mr. Stupich took the floor. He had to shout down the hecklers to get his points across.

When a questioner stated that Saskatchewan was an example of NDP failure, Mr. Stupich asked if the policies such as medicare, car insurace and other programs were NDP failures.

He said that Alberta had suffered its first deficit because oil royalties had dropped but in Saskatchewan the royalty program, was such that the people would benefit as long as oil was produced.

Mr. Stupich said the Social Credit government was treating the proposed $3,000,000 loan to Commonwealth Trust exactly as he predicted. When the loan was first proposed, providing shareholders could meet several conditions, he had said they would not be able to meet those conditions, one of which was to put up $4,000,000 first.

LOAN UNLIKELY

Recently Premier Bennett announced that shareholders had not met the conditions and that it was unlikely the loan would be made.

Mr. Plecas said that Bill 33, or any other legislation referring to labor, would be ineffective. He felt public opinion was more important.

APPLAUDED

Mr. Plecas drew applause from the audience after a jocular question was posed. He was asked why it was the NDP claimed credit for programs instituted by the Socreds.

He replied that was the natural result of democratic process where opposition parties suggested improvements and the government implemented them.

He said that without free political opposition, there would be a government such as that in Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy and he was proud to live in a country where opposition had its freedom.

Mr. Ney predicted upturn years in the 1970s. He said the first 17 years of Socred government built a healthy budget which was ready for programs of provincial improvement.

COMMITTED

He said that Premier Bennett had already committed the government to increased old age pensions and social assurance payments.

Mr Ney said: "He has never gone back on his word on these two programs."

He said the surplus was a result of a prudent fiscal policy; that his opinion of land banks, as proposed by the NDP, were that if Toronto had had land banks, the homeowner would not have to pay exhorbitant land costs today.

In B.C., however, and especially in the Nanaimo area, fully-serviced lots in blacktopped areas were available for a couple of thousand dollars.

Bathtubbers Welcomed Home

Bathtub Commodore Les Mottishaw congratulated victorious Departure Bay bathtubbers after success at Kelowna regatta recently. From left are Robin Pederson, Pat Fagan, Bill Laughlin and Richard Stephens. Team brought first place perpetual trophy home with them. Members were supposed to leave it at Kelowna and receive keeper trophy. "There was no way that was going to happen. If that trophy's going to stay in Kelowna, Kelowna's going to have to win it," said Mr. Fagan, Departure Bay fire chief.—(Arnold Olson)

Low-Average Students In at UVic

Low-average high school graduates are being notified that they will be admitted to the University of Victoria this fall, the university announced Monday.

UVic thus eased fears that many South Island students would be refused admission because of an administrative squeeze between the campus and the high schools.

Ronald Jeffels, UVic director of admissions, also reminded students that the deadline for admission applications is Aug. 15.

RESTRICTIONS

Late in June, after receiving an allegedly inadequate operating grant from the provincial government, UVic announced its first enrolment restrictions.

Total enrolment this fall will be limited to 5,000, including 2,000 first-year students.

A priority system has been set up for freshmen giving precedence to those with a high school graduation average of C-plus or higher — 67 per cent.

In past years the university accepted anyone who graduated from high school on the academic program, which meant a passing average as low as 50 per cent.

Complaints were voiced this summer that some students who had passed on recommendations would be unable to enter UVic.

Their marks, which they might have improved by writing government exams, would be inadequate to gain admission, some feared.

NOTICES OUT

UVic announced Monday that "notice of admission has already gone to applicants in the first five priorities, including all who had a letter-grade average of C or better in eight core subjects in Grades 11 and 12.

"Still standing by are students who passed with a lower average and those whose residence is not in B.C. (other than a few particularly distinguished students.)

Mr. Jeffels said:

"Students in this lower category will have to wait until registration week to learn whether they can be admitted."

LATE SPACE

He noted that some space always becomes available at registration week (beginning Sept. 8) because some who apply for admission change their minds.

He urged anyone in doubt to apply now.

College Popular

NANAIMO — Dr. Carl Opgaard, president of Malaspina College, said Tuesday more than 500 students have applied to attend the college next month.

He said the Island's first regional college had been budgeted for 400 but it was clear applications could hit 600 by the end of the registration period Sept. 3-5.

Faculty Tour Due Monday

DUNCAN — The faculty of Malaspina College will tour the Cowichan and Lake Cowichan school districts Monday to familiarize itself wth some of the areas the college will serve.

At 9:30 a.m. the group will be welcomed by Mayor Donald Morton at North Cowichan Municipal hall and at noon faculty members will have lunch at Honeymoon Bay.

ESKILSTUNA, Sweden (UPI) —More than 50 firemen stood by and watched fire rage through a three-storey apartment building in this south Swedish city. The blaze began on the 12th floor and the fire brigade ladders reached only to the ninth. Five hundred people were evacuated with no injuries.

Tisdalle Discusses Problem

Other Area MLAs Share Pat Bay Link-Up Blame

Social Crediter John Tisdalle unburdened himself of the Pat Bay Highway "kerfuffle" Monday night, and tossed the blame to a few of his fellow candidates.

Mr. Tisdalle told about 40 Rotarians at the Red Lion that he will "no longer" speak for the condition of the Pat Bay Highway and the lack of a link-up with the Rose-Blanshard boulevard.

Mr. Tisdalle who has often in the legislature criticized his own party government policy on the Pat Bay highway, said that MLAs from Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria constituencies must also answer for the highway situation, and that the attitude of the municipalities has also contributed to the "continuing kerfuffle."

OTHER MLAs

Mr. Tisdalle's party brothers, Waldo Skillings, William Chant and Herbert Bruch hold three other seats in Greater Victoria; the fifth has been held by Liberal Allan Cox.

His remarks came at a Saanich and the Islands all-candidate meeting sponsored by the Douglas Rotarians, in response to a question from the floor.

Mr. Tisdalle, Saanich MLA since 1953, said he feared that if a highway link-up with a city artery was built around Town and Country shopping centre, the area would become commercially "decadent."

His comments came in response to opposing candidate Don Johannessen's earlier suggestion that Mr. Tisdalle as Saanich MLA was neglecting the highway issue.

"One of the problems I'm finding is that people wish they had an MLA for this area," Mr. Johannessen said. "Where was their MLA when they were trying to link this highway?"

"We've got to have an MLA who will get his leader . . . into the riding where he's needed."

Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm said of the highway: "Unquestionably, something has to be done about that deathtrap," and said "we should work towards" a Rose-Blanshard link-up.

In his earlier speech, Mr. Lindholm said secondary industry could not develop in B.C. "as long as resources can be taken out at wholesale rates" by foreign investors. He said the "rush" at Roberts Bank superport is only to "make it possible" for an American company to sell $650,000,000 worth of coal to Japan.

Mr. Lindholm said Canada could develop a merchant marine of its own by moving the coal in Canadian ships.

Night Courses Approved For Grade 13

PORT ALBERNI — Alberni Valley school trustees have agreed to transfer Grade 13 from regular daytime schedules to the adult education program. The action follows a large number of enquiries which have been received since the proposal was first initiated earlier this year.

Principal W. N. Burgess of Alberni district high school recommended the same fees be continued, with a full course of subjects offered for $100 or separate courses at $25 each subject.

Classes will be held from 5:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m., in the evenings, an arrangement which it appears will permit many employed persons to take advantage of the opportunity to continue their education, and will also permit recent Grade 12 graduates to work while they study.

Last year, 48 enrolled in Grade 13 in September and 42 completed the course.

The proposed change will not affect the provincial grant, the board has been assured, and present staff have agreed to teach the evening courses.

The Campbell River Upper Islander won three awards — second best all around weekly newspaper in its class, circulation 3,001 to 6,000, third best editorial page and second best spot news photograph.

The photograph, taken by Stan Smart of Gold River, showed the Dutch freighter, Schidyk sinking off Bligh Island on the west coast of the Island last January.

Editor Robbie Rose won a B.C. journalism award in October. He received third prize for a story on Open Bay, Quadra Island.

Nanaimo Meeting

Views Given On Exhibition

NANAIMO — The Vancouver Island Exhibition question seems to be what comes first — the commitment or the lease.

Nanaimo Jaycees held a special information meeting in the Shoreland Hotel which was attended by speakers representing the exhibition, parks and recreation commission and Exhibition Park.

Jim Mills, exhibition president, and Wes Callbick, cattle chairman since 1961, explained that the exhibition's attitude while commission chairman Bill McGregor and Exhibition Park committee chairman Ray Hindle gave their views.

PLANS REQUEST

Mr. Hindle said that the exhibition society was asked on June 2 to come up with plans for the future use of the park but there had been no reply so far.

"Would you offer a lease to people who offered nothing in return? I would not," he said.

"They come with nothing except, 'we want a lease . . . we want a lease.'"

He said there would be no lease unless there was some reciprocity of commitment.

PROPOSAL URGED

"Let them come to the recreation commission with a proposal."

Mr. Mills countered with an explanation that in discussions with both federal and provincial government authorities, he was told there would be no grants or financial aid to the exhibition society unless the society had some concrete ownership, leases or agreements indicating the monies would not disappear.

He said that if the city authorities needed any assurance that there would be money spent, all they had to do was to look over the expenditures which totalled more than $90,000 since 1962.

"We had a broom with a broken handle which has disappeared," Mr. Mills said, referring to the money spent on buildings which were not maintained and had fallen apart — some had been condemned.

Party Held For Children

GALIANO ISLAND — The Galiano Club committee decided some time ago that they should sponsor a picnic for the children on Galiano and make it a real fun day.

It was held Sunday at one of the best beaches on the Island — one near Dr. M. E. Hall's property.

Dr. Hall gave permission for cars to park on the property and refreshments were provided by the Galiano Club, and gifts were given by Dr. Hall and Eddie Bambrick.

The event was organized by Mrs. Dorothy Walton, Mrs. Linda Laughlin and Mrs. Corinne Snell.

Games were played during the afternoon, directed by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Berger, Mrs. Snell, and Mrs. D. A. New.

Club president Tom Carolan and his helpers gave out hot dogs, cookies, ice cream, pop and coffee.

They included Mrs. Ron Callaghan, Mrs. Fred Crompton, Mrs. Jacquie Bexler, Mrs. New, Mrs. Snell and Mrs. Dave Laughlin.

More than 50 children lined up for the goodies, then played more games before going home.

Tons of Drugs Junk's Cargo

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Officers of the narcotics bureau sailing in an unmarked boat stopped a junk in Hong Kong harbor and seized about two tons of drugs. The drugs, consisting of 4,320 pounds of morphine and 66 pounds of opium were valued at $2,000,000.

Arctic Oil Voyage Benefits Seen

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could be the big winner in a multi-million-dollar American gamble to prove that huge oil tankers can navigate the Northwest Passage on a year-round basis.

Humble Oil and Refinery Co. of Houston is spending $30,000,000 to send the 150,000-ton Manhattan through the passage starting Friday in hopes Alaskan oil eventually can be moved cheaply by ship to the east coast of the United States.

The Manhattan, about 1,000 feet long, is the largest ship ever to attempt the ice-infested waters of the passage. If successful, it could be the forerunner of tankers twice as big transporting up to 30,000,000,000 barrels of crude oil from the potentially-rich northern slope of Alaska to the American market.

"The tanker route would enable us to bring crude oil to the Atlantic seaboard at a substantial cost advantage over alternate methods of transportation," says Humble president Charles Jones.

One estimate is that oil moved by the tanker would cost 60 cents a barrel less than oil moved by pipeline.

Canada's contribution to the daring gamble is Arctic experience, the use of the icebreaker John A. Macdonald, aircraft fitted with special remote sensing equipment for mapping and assessing ice conditions in the passage, and the services of meteorological and telecommunications bases across the Arctic.

Because of its contributions, Canada will share in most of the scientific data gleaned from the historic venture.

If the Manhattan successfully charts a tanker route, then it follows that any oil found in the Canadian Arctic can be transported by the same route. Ottawa officials have long maintained that Arctic oil must be low-cost oil to penetrate world markets. Thus, cheap transportation is a must.

A shipping route also would make feasible development of any large mineral discoveries such as the iron ore deposits discovered at Mary River on Baffin Island.

Said to be the richest find of iron ore in the world and among the largest, the Mary River mines have been left untapped because of the short shipping season in the Canadian North.

School Taxes On Property Going—Berger

By IAN STREET

An NDP government would not remove school taxes from property during its first term of office but it would take the first step towards this goal. NDP leader Tom Berger said Tuesday.

* * *

He told a press conference here that it remains one of the goals of the NDP to remove the burden of school taxes from property. But the cost of education cannot be taken out of general revenue until an alternative source of revenue is found, the leader added.

* * *

Victory at the polls Aug. 27 would allow an NDP government to take the first step towards this goal, however, by decreeing that the financing and operation of regional colleges are a provincial rather than a local responsiblity.

"We don't think the local taxpayer should be forced to pay so much for education that he rebels when asked to pay more," Mr. Berger said. "Voters are turning down regional colleges all over the province and I don't blame them."

* * *

He noted that the Liberals are promising in this election that they will remove school taxes from property. Mr. Berger added: "Dr. McGeer can say that because he is not going to be faced with this responsibility, but I think we might be."

The NDP leader stressed that if his party forms the next government it would not take away the provincial homeowner grant.

"The homeowner grant is something that people rely upon," he said, "and under an NDP government they will continue to get it."

The press conference was attended by several executive members of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association

Some Won't Fit

● Ombudsman Promised by Berger.—Page 23.

NDP leader Tom Berger said Tuesday there would be "no wholesale firings" in the civil service if his party forms the next provincial government but added that certain top officials would be replaced.

He was commenting in an interview following a press conference on published reports in which the NDP leader was quoted as saying half a dozen deputy ministers would be fired following an NDP victory at the polls Aug. 27.

* * *

"We've got a lot of first class people in the civil service," Mr. Berger said. "We're going to give them bargaining rights so that they can protect themselves from the government, their employer.

"But there are cases I think where people who served this government well, who served Bennett well, will not really fit into a New Democratic administration."

He added "We think these

Takeover by London Urged

RIOTS RIP ULSTER

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

LONDONDERRY (UPI) — Police using armored cars and tear gas and followed by gangs of stone-throwing Protestant youths battled Catholic rioters Tuesday and early today, prompted the Ulster government to consider calling in British troops.

Catholic civil rights leaders and members of parliament urged Britain to suspend Northern Ireland's constitution and take over governing powers.

The fighting, principally between police and Catholics, broke out Tuesday afternoon when Catholic youths stoned a parade of the Protestant "Apprentice Boys of Derry."

WILD BATTLE

It stretched through the evening and into the early hours of today — a wild battle scene that saw Catholics barricaded inside their own Bogside district hurling firebombs and bricks into the faces of police who came on firing water cannon and finally tear gas.

(Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark held an emergency meeting of his cabinet security committee in Belfast and told newsmen "the calling in of British troops is one of the options open to my government in the present situation.")

Opponents of that course, including many in Britain, have argued such a move would be tantamount to handing over the government of Northern Ireland to London.

'DOOMSDAY RIOT'

The new violence in Londonderry, second largest city in Ulster and the major town holding a Roman Catholic majority here, confirmed the worst fears of those who said the Protestant celebration could turn into a doomsday of rioting.

Some 20,000 of this country's majority Protestants gathered here Tuesday to celebrate the 280th anniversary of the defeat by Protestant forces of the armies of deposed King James II of England. James was a Catholic monarch trying to fight his way back to the throne.

The brawls started with the stoning of the parade, police said, and then spread to the Bogside area outside the old city walls. There Catholics made a fortress of their home terrain with street barricades.

GIRLS MAKE BOMBS

Teenage girls filled and stuffed gasoline bombs and passed the ammunition to their men, who heaved them down atop police advancing on foot and in armored cars. Behind the police armored cars, Protestant youths advanced like wary riflemen, grabbing handfuls of stones from wheelbarrows pushed by their girls and tossing them at the Catholics.

Some 85 policemen had been injured by early today, at least eight seriously. More than 150 persons received first aid behind the Catholic barricades.

'KEEP FIGHTING'

Bernadette Devlin, a Catholic civil rights leader and member of British parliament, issued a joint statement with civil rights leader Eamonn McCann, saying the riots proved "Northern Ireland is ungovernable under the present constitution . . ."

They urged Catholics to keep fighting until the British government "states its clear commitment to the suspension of the constitution and called immediately a constitutional conference."

POLICEMAN ABLAZE

One policeman was set afire and "seriously injured" when a gasoline bomb hit him in the chest exploding onto his face. His comrades rolled him on the ground and took him to hospital.

In Bogside behind the lines young women, mostly wearing jeans and sweaters, hustled up ammunition for their men.

"They've had this coming for a long time," said pretty, dark-haired shopgirl Maureen Roche. "We've had to put up with their bullying for years."

An elderly couple, arm-in-arm, stood fearfully in a doorway.

"My two sons are out there and I wouldn't have them anywhere else," said Mrs. Bridget Lynch, her husband nodding agreement.

Jet Overshoots, Injures Four On Highway

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands (UPI)—A Caribair DC9 jetliner Tuesday crashed through a fence at the end of a runway while landing and injured four persons on the ground as it slammed into six cars on a busy highway. The 103 persons on the plane were not hurt.

The two-engine jet operated by the Puerto Rico-based Caribbean Atlantic Airways was making a landing on a flight from San Juan when it rolled off the end of the 5,000-foot runway at Harry S. Truman Airport.

* * *

The plane narrowly averted plowing into fuel pumps at a gasoline station across the highway where an explosive fire would have been virtually certain.

Nobody on the plane was injured but four passengers in cars rammed by the plane as it skidded across the road were hospitalized, one of them in serious condition.

* * *

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said the accident was apparently a result of a failure of the "spoiler" flaps on the wings of the plane, but a Caribair spokesman said the plane apparently skidded on a rain-slippery runway.

Assault-by-Pierre Claimant Takes Too Many Pep Pills

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 17-year-old Niagara Falls, Ont., youth who says Prime Minister Trudeau assaulted him during a demonstration here Friday was taken to Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday for treatment of a suspected drug overdose.

Richard Jesmer told a reporter he had taken "about 20 pep pills or get-up pills," but did not know what type or how strong they were.

Hospital officials said he was in satisfactory condition in the emergency ward.

They said he would be kept in hospital overnight but declined to give any additional details.

Meanwhile, a justice of the peace will decide Friday whether to proceed with a charge of common assault against Mr. Trudeau following a complaint by Jesmer, who says the Liberal leader "is pretty tough for a skinny guy."

The complaint was sworn Monday by Jesmer at Vancouver police headquarters before Justice of the Peace Don Stewart. Jesmer claims Mr. Trudeau "smacked me" during a wild demonstration last Friday night at the Seaforth armory.

The incident is alleged to have taken place during a meeting between the prime minister and 300 anti-Vietnam war demonstrators at which Mr. Trudeau was booed, jeered and pelted with a banana peel.

Mr. Trudeau attended the anti-war rally with the intention of speaking, but was unable to make himself heard. It was held in advance of a $50-a-plate Liberal fund-raising dinner which Mr. Trudeau later addressed inside the armory.

Mr. Stewart said the complaint means Mr. Trudeau "is definitely charged but no evidence has been heard." He said he will hear evidence at 4:15 p.m. PDT Friday and "then I will either issue a summons or not."

NO PROCESS

"It means Mr. Trudeau literally has been charged but there has been no process to command his appearance before any court," said the justice of the peace. "It is at my discretion."

Under the Criminal Code of Canada a common assault charge can be pursued as an indictable offence or a less serious summary conviction.

If dealt with as a summary conviction the maximum pen-

'Phase Out' Better Than Base Closure

HALIFAX (CP) — Tom Morry, assistant deputy minister of national defence, told the National Defence Employees Association convention here Tuesday 3,000 defence employees may be laid off in the department's base consolidation program.

Morry, who was commenting on a statement by the defence employees association president, Clint Hornby of Winnipeg, said:

* * *

"You say 3,000 people may be cut. You might be right, but I hope you're wrong."

Morry, in a luncheon speech to 230 delegates, said the defence department is in for "belt tightening" and that an announcement of the measures to be taken could come "very soon."

Several Maritime Command military establishments have been mentioned in recent speculation as due for closure or severe reductions in operations.

* * *

The assistant deputy minister said he would like to see the words "close out" or "closure" replaced with "phase out." This would allow sufficient time for those affected by the changes to re-establish themselves.

He said retraining programs were necessary for those whose jobs might be lost in a consolidation program.

Moon Travellers Report

It's Nice Place to Visit

By RUDY ABRAMSON

HOUSTON (LAT) — The first men to visit the moon found it in a way more pleasant than Earth, and their only regret about it is that they did not get to stay longer.

"It's a stark and strangely different place," said Apollo 11 commander Neil Armstrong, "but it looked friendly to me and it was friendly."

* * *

Armstrong said that when he and astronaut Edwin Aldrin landed on the moon's Sea of Tranquility July 20, they immediately found the moon's gentle gravity preferable to that of the earth, or the weightlessness of space.

It was because they felt comfortable that they decided to go right ahead with their walk on the surface rather than take a planned rest period.

With about two-and-one-half hours to work outside, Armstrong said, "we had the problem of a five-year-old boy in a candy store. There were just too many interesting things to do.

"There was far too little time to do the myriad things we wanted to do."

* * *

When Armstrong and Aldrin climbed back into the landing craft Eagle after their moon walk, they still had half of their oxygen and a little less than half of their cooking water remaining. But they did not want to come close to exhausting their supply because they were not certain how difficult it would be to get back inside their spacecraft and repressurize its cabin.

* * *

Armstrong, Aldrin, and fellow crewman Michael Collins recounted their adventure in a press conference at the Manned Spacecraft Centre Tuesday.

They were released from quarantine late Sunday, and will set off early today for parades in New York and Chicago before the state dinner in Los Angeles tonight at 8:30 PDT.

* * *

Military bands and choruses rehearsed their numbers and White House aides recorded last-minute changes in the guest list Tuesday on the eve of one of the great parties in Los Angeles history.

In the Century Plaza ballroom, the tune of Fly Me to The Moon mingled with the sound of television technicians setting up their equipment.

Early Wednesday evening 1,600 guests — including 55 astronauts, 44 state governors, leading members of Congress and a glittering assemblance of aviation

Rumor Wins Favor For Minority Rule

ROME (UPI) — The Italian senate Tuesday night endorsed the minority government of Premier Mariano Rumor and thus officially established it in office.

The 322-seat senate gave Rumor a 64-vote majority in the vote of confidence. The chamber of deputies, lower house of Italy's parliament had endorsed Rumor's minority government Sunday with a 51-vote majority.

After failing to heal a breach in the Socialist party and establish a new coalition, Rumor formed a government made up of only his Christian Democrat colleagues. It adopted a program of modified reforms, hoping to stay in office until a new coalition and majority government could be formed.

Immediately after voting, the senate adjourned until mid-September, when the political tempo is expected to pick up sharply as millions of workers and students return from vacation.
